BOROUGH COUNCIL

Last night brought approval on the first reading of building and housing codes, but not without opposition. Representatives were on hand to urge caution in adopting the codes to Warren's specific needs. Among those present was a member of the Citizens Advisory Council, who said the urban renewal advisors were holding to their recommendation that the codes be reviewed before adoption. Page One.

Cable television, and the industry's plan to recall outstanding certificates issued about 15 years ago, came in for its share of criticism. The chambers were packed with people who asked a resolution be passed to request the television interests delay their decision. Council did so, Page One.

FIRE DESTROYS GRAND VALLEY STORE

Arsonists are suspected of setting a fire which leveled the former Robert Chamber's store in Grand Valley early yesterday morning. The 105-year-old Warren County landmark was completely destroyed while firefighters from four communities fought to control flames which also ate through an adjacent residence owned by Sheldon Baker. The Bakers and their six children escaped without injury. Firemen worked through a steady rain. State police Cpl. William C. Kattner of the Warren substation, a former fire marshal is investigating. Police Suspect Arson In Grand Valley Fire

Arson is suspected in a nearly morning blaze yesterday that leveled a Grand Valley landmark and left a family of eight homeless.

Burned to the ground is the old Chamber's Store in Grand Valley, thought to be about 105 years old. A home next to the store, owned by Sheldon Baker, was ruined about 75 per cent when flames engulfed the entire corner.

State police Cpl. William C. Kattner of the Warren substation, who is continuing his investigation, said arson is suspected.

According to Kattner, the Garland Volunteer Fire Department, first on the scene of the conflagration, reported at 6:30 a.m. yesterday, arrived at 6:35 a.m. and was joined by volunteers from Spring Creek, Pleasantville and Titusville.

Firemen used 2,000 feet of hose for water from a nearby creek to battle the blaze. The store had been closed by its former owner, Robert Chambers in 1964.

According to Kattner, there had been no electricity inside the building since its closing three years ago. The property had been purchased by Sheldon Baker, but was not insured at the time of the fire. Police said the last time the structure was insured it was for $5,000 by Erie Exchange.

The blaze knocked out telephone service in the area and telephone repairmen were inspecting the damage.

One pole had been damaged and may have to be replaced.

About $400 worth of paint went up in flames inside the store building and a large meat counter was destroyed.

A delegation from the Grand Valley area came to the county court house today to ask county commissioners what could be accomplished in the way of financing a pool there since water facilities are extremely limited when it comes to effectively fighting fires.

Marines Hold Fast In Close Fighting

(C) N.Y. Times News Service SAIGON — American Marines beat back an assault by more than a thousand North Vietnamese troops yesterday in savage, close quarter fighting two miles south of the Demilitarized Zone.

Thirty-five Marines were killed and 99 Americans were wounded in the battle for possession of a base camp on a hill at Conthien. When the main attack was repulsed after three hours of fighting, 179 North Vietnamese bodies remained.

A spokesman said four companies of South Vietnamese in-regulars, part of a U.S. Special Forces detachment at Conthien, suffered moderate casualties in the fighting.

The North Vietnamese, believed to be from the 812th Regiment of the 324th North Vietnamese Division, began the attack at 3 a.m. with a barrage of 250 mortar rounds. This was followed by an assault against the barbed wire perimeter of the base.

The shelling of Conthien was one of four coordinated mortar and rocket attacks against U.S. Marines positions just south of the Demilitarized Zone.

Also hit were Marine camps at Dongha, Giolinh and Camp Carroll, the artillery base. A spokesman said five Marines were wounded at Dongha and three at Camp Carroll.

Hanoi Received Exaggerated Casualty Figures

WASHINGTON (AP) — Top Viet Cong leaders in South Vietnam informed Hanoi late last year that Communist troops killed 88,000 Americans during the first nine months of 1966, Pentagon sources disclosed yesterday.

If that claim were correct, the Viet Cong would have wiped out well over one-fourth of the peak U.S. strength in Viet Nam in September, 311,000.

Defense figures for the same period, however, showed 3,558 American dead — and about 41,000 Communists killed.

This amazing disparity between what the Viet Cong claim to be achieving militarily in South Vietnam and what is actually being reported is accompanied by the North Vietnamese penetrated the perimeter of Conthien at two points, using rockets and satchel charges inside the defenses to knock out two armored track vehicles, two trucks and a road grader. They also damaged three tanks and three armored weapons vehicles.

The Marines threw back the attackers at dawn. At 9:30 a.m., Marine reinforcements arrived to support the position. A military spokesman said sporadic fighting continued through the day.

Lt. Gen. Lewis W. Walt, commander of U.S. Marines in Vietnam, visited the battle scene in the morning, and escaped injury when a mortar round fell 15 feet away.

WITH COMPROMISES

Council Approves First Reading Of Building Codes

By BETTY RICE

Warren borough council last night unanimously approved on first reading only, proposed building and housing codes—but not without compromise.

Ray A. Marti, chairman of the planning committee, in presenting the ordinances reminded council the codes were only in "their first draft" and that many changes are anticipated in time.

Marti said council would like to incorporate suggestions from the Citizens' Advisory Committee (although not new completely to the line) prior to second reading at council's next meeting at 7:30 p.m., Monday, May 29.

The chairman noted that recommendations from the advisory group presented "good, substantial ideas for the borough both legally and in accordance with the standard codes" upon which local ones are based as to context. He said the planning commission, urban renewal consultants and advisory committee members will get together and try to incorporate ideas.

Marti, however, pointed out that the codes should have been developed years ago—even before the pressure put forth by urban renewal programs.

The vote on the proposed plumbing codes drew two negative responses from Dr. Robert Probst and Edwin E. Sullivan.

The first urban renewal project for Warren borough—the Liberty St. parking lot—is scheduled for a public hearing at 8 p.m. tomorrow in the large court room of the court house.

Representatives of industry and Citizens' Advisory Committee were on hand last night to oppose swift action on the part of council in approving codes in question.

Kenneth Holtz, CAC member, said the committee had not changed its mind since codes had not been gone over thoroughly. He said CAC was concerned over possible misuse or abuse of the codes in question and urged council to be "very careful before final adoption."

It appeared council planned to give serious review as to code terminology in some areas as well as some insertions relative to maintenance crews in industry and more study as to what would be substantial changes made by individual homeowners as to installation of their own facilities.

An anticipated protest from citizens in regard to Warren

Television Corporation's recent edict, recalling its Capital Contribution Certificates and eventually increasing monthly rates of original subscribers, found council chambers filled with quietly irate, but articulate, persons.

Council, however, was prepared and unanimously approved a resolution that, having received the protests, it would go on record in asking that Warren Television Inc. delay its rate increase and recall of Capital Contribution Certificates (for which subscribers paid $125 and to be redeemed for $57) so that council can protect its interests. Borough manager Victor L. Miller was instructed to so notify Warren Television.

Borough solicitor S. Knox Harper said council, legally, could see fit to adjust fees charged by the present licensee (to which a franchise was granted in 1962 relative to wires along borough streets). Warren Television, at the time, was to comply with Bell Telephone regulations and insurance.

Speaking on behalf of citizens opposing Warren Television's move, Edward Farynowski, of See COUNCIL, Page A-2

Suddenly, It's 'Attractive'

Demolition of the former First EUB Church, now under way adjacent to the Warren municipal building, was described to borough council last night as an "attractive nuisance."

Since what remains of the structure is wide open, young people are prone to wander in and injuries could result.

It was noted that although the primary liability is on the contractor engaged in tearing down the edifice, the borough, should insist on necessary protection to "keep the kids out."

There was some question as to the ages of the "kids" since the operation has attracted many sidewalk superintendents.

United Fund Sets 'Thank You Day'

Raymond S. Stein, immediate past president of the United Fund of Warren County, will be toastmaster for the third biannual Thank You Day Luncheon on Election day in the Woman's Club auditorium.

United Fund leaders will express appreciation to the citizens and business firms of Warren County for their support of the annual campaign which benefits 10 local health, welfare and youth agencies.

Stein, who served as UF president during the 1966 campaign, said that 23 industries who gave unusual support to the drive last fall, will be awarded special recognition at the luncheon.

In addition, awards will be made to several individuals who have performed outstanding jobs working as volunteers for the United Funds.

All members of the Warren Lions Club will attend the luncheon in place of their regular Tuesday meeting. Also invited are members of the boards of directors of the UF agencies, campaign leaders from all parts of the county, members of Rotary, Kiwanis, Zonta, BPW and other service clubs.

Making arrangements for Thank You Day is the public relations committee, whose members are William Wolfersberger, chairman, Julius Thorn, George Rice, Leroy Schneck, Bernard Wingert, Ursula Johnson, Captain Albert Carter, Donna Pingrey, James Howell, and Milton Peterson.

Schools Budget: $7.7 Million

By STEVE CULLINANE

The budget of Warren County School District for 1967-68 was adopted at last night's district school board meeting. Payments to insurance agents were also discussed.

School taxes will remain at this year's levels. The new budget totals $7,758,154, up $964,924 from this year's budget, but increased state aid is expected to make up the difference.

Some $741,000 of the new budget will cover costs of construction at Eisenhower High School and at Allegheny Valley School, said district superintendent Thomas K. Barratt last month.

Taxes will be as follows: Thirty-four mills on the assessed valuation of all real estate in the district; a per capita tax of $5; a $5 resident tax; and a .5 per cent earned income tax. Bond sinking funds require an additional three mill real estate tax in Pine Grove and Farmington townships, and an additional four mill real estate tax in Tidioute Borough. Speidel - Lesser Insurance Agency received a commission of $3,442.48 under the Warren County School District comprehensive institutional policy.

The board decided, after discussion, that Speidel-Lesser would keep 50 per cent of that commission and give the rest to other insurance agencies in the county. Why the commission should be split was not made perfectly clear.

"It's gravy in their pockets," said one official at the meeting, "They aren't doing anything."

He was referring to the agencies with which Speidel-Lesser has been required to split the commission.

The Buildings and Grounds Committee explained in their report how the percentages of the split commissions were determined. They said:

"Using 1967 property insurance values of the Warren County School District as a basis, the amounts reflected the former districts' percentages of property insurance within that area.

"From the breakdown of property insurance percentages, the commission that each district would receive was determined.

Schools Deposit $.5 Million

Warren County School District board last night considered an upcoming State Education Board meeting in Erie, the investment of $500,000 of district funds, a recent hike in Oil City teachers' pay, and a vocational-technical program—among other things.

District superintendent Thomas K. Barratt was given permission to attend a meeting of the State Board in Erie at 3 p.m. tomorrow at the Holiday Inn. Barratt said, in discussion of the upcoming meeting, that a letter had been received from Duane Wilder concerning community colleges. He suggested that board members might want to discuss the letter, in public or in private. There was no further mention of the letter at the board meeting, but a "teachers committee" meeting, closed to the press, was held after the board meeting was adjourned.

Barratt said the invitation to the Erie meeting stated "All sessions will be private." The purpose of the meeting will be said, "exploration of the possibility of a cooperative program in which all education resources of Northwestern Pennsylvania could be involved." Among these at the meeting will be presidents of both public and private colleges.

The board voted to deposit $500,000 at interest in local banks. Warren National Bank and Pennsylvania Bank & Trust, will each get a deposit of $250,000. Half will be deposited for 60 days, half for 90 days. The money has in the past been invested in treasury bills.

Fuelhart, an original subscriber had conferred with Frame who said since Warren TV was not under the jurisdiction of the Public Utilities

The Warren resident added that Senator Clark had acknowledged receipt of the citizens' letter and appreciated being advised of developments, stating that the "notice from Warren Television may be by design."

Council was in receipt of a petition representing 335 subscribers who had signed within 96 hours asking council to take serious action.

Applause greeted council's unanimous decision to request a delay in Warren Television's proposed action.

"The amount of premiums paid each agent for the year 1966 were then compiled within a district and that percentage was used in determining the amount of commission each agent would receive."

Barratt said after the meeting he wished to emphasize that the split-commission system does not cost the taxpayer any more than would a single commission system. The total amount of the commission or commissions is set by the state, he said.

The list of percentages each agent will get was altered at last night's meeting. H. Speidel was listed as getting 3.5 per cent more than the 50 per cent allotted to Speidel-Lesser. This extra 3.5 per cent was eliminated by a board decision. The listing of percentages which follows is not completely accurate since the 3.5 per cent will be divided among other agents.

These are the percentages as first recommended to the board:

Speidel-Lesser, 50 per cent; Warren County Insurance Co., 9.4; Garrison-Wolfe, 1.8; M. Schwartz, J. H. Thompson, 4.56; W. Sandberg, 5.05; D. Aberg, 1.1; Winans Insurance Co., 1.55; C. Exaggerate tually happening was shown in a captured Communist document.

The paper, among many seized in the fighting, was a report on the war by the president of the Communist military organization in South Vietnam, the Central Office, South Vietnam.

Pentagon sources say it illustrates how the Viet Cong may be deceiving their leaders in Hanoi, as well as their troops, about the progress of the Communist effort to overthrow Saigon.

Officials feel the enemy's masking of the true military situation may be one reason the North Vietnamese continue pressing the war despite growing allied power. In short, they appear to be victims of their own lies.

U.S. officials last March spoke of how the Viet Cong were deliberately understating their battle losses while exaggerating American casualties 20 to 40 times.

The Associated Press asked for specific examples of distorted claims. Pentagon sources, while unwilling to provide copies of the documents because of intelligence reasons, gave excerpts from some captured papers.

A report by the Viet Cong military staff of the Communist's Region 4 last November claimed 5,754 U.S. troops killed in the Cu Chai district northwest of Saigon between Feb. 1 and Sept. 20, 1966. The Pentagon said actual U.S. losses were 276.

Another Communist document, stamped top secret by intelligence experts because it contains a wealth of information about enemy plans, stated that 48,322 Americans were, as the Viet Cong phrased it, "put out of action" during the first half of 1966. The Pentagon places American losses during the same period at 2,477.

School District Taking Bids on Two Buildings

Russell and Pittsfield elementary school buildings and land will be put up for bids.

Bear Lake elementary school will be closed at the end of this school year.

These were among the decisions of Warren County School District board last night. The condition of South St. School was mentioned in a report.

Bids on the Russell and Pittsfield schools will be considered by the board; no bid will necessarily be accepted. Ten per cent of a bid will be required as a guarantee at the time of bidding. Although the land in question is not now on the tax rolls, the school district will not pay taxes if the land should become taxable in the future. Further details will be available when the board advertises for bids.

This letter indicated that, of the 11 items listed, seven have been corrected, two will be cared for in summer maintenance, and two will be completed as soon as the materials already ordered have been received. A conference has been held on this matter and it has been mutually agreed that the check-list is being satisfactorily observed."

Highway from Montreal to New York City Has Heavy Traffic in Dope

BY CHARLES GRUTZNER
(c) N.Y. Times News Service
NEW YORK — The 385 miles of paved highway between Montreal and New York City constitute one of the principal narcotics traffic routes on this continent. At each end of the trail, law enforcement agents say, are members and associates of the Mafia family headed by Joseph (Joe Bananas) Bonanno.

The agents report that millions of dollars in illicit drugs from European and Mediterranean seaports and airports are smuggled annually into Canada's great port city for overland transit to New York.

A large amount of heroin is carried by Mafia couriers in private cars, difficult to spot in the heavy traffic that flows across the open border.

Despite these difficulties, federal narcotics agents have made many seizures. But with more than 6 million United States visitors expected in Montreal within the next six months for the recently opened Expo 67, United States and Canadian authorities have stepped up their investigations of Mafia connections on both sides of the border.

The following report on some of those connections has been pieced together by examination of postee records and interviews with dozens of government officials, state or provincial prosecutors, local police officers and detectives and other knowledgeable persons in both countries.

The Senate Permanent Committee on Investigations has compiled a list of narcotics convictions of members of all five of the Mafia families, or gangs, that radiate outward from New York. The biggest share of the drug traffic was handled for years by the family headed by Vito Genovese, who is now serving a 15-year prison term for narcotics conspiracy. According to federal investigators, Thomas (Tommy Ryan) Eboli is managing various enterprises of the family in the absence of its titular leader.

Other Mafia families in the New York metropolitan area that have been involved in the narcotics traffic are those headed by Carlo (Don Carlo) Gambino, Thomas (Three Finger Brown) Luchese and Joseph Colombo. The government also has a list of narcotics traffickers in the family of Stefano Magaddino, whose territory extends from Western New York into the Ohio Valley, with outposts in Canada. A Mafia family is a group of individuals who are not necessarily blood relatives.

The police in both countries are focusing investigations upon the Bonanno and Magaddino families because of the recent power struggle in the Bonanno family. Magaddino, a member of the Mafia's national council, was more than an onlooker in the struggle. Investigators say he was responsible for the choice of Gaspare DiGregorio, to whom he is related by marriage, to replace Bonanno as family leader after the latter was kidnapped at gunpoint on a New York street on Oct. 21, 1964.

The 62-year-old Bonanno recently returned to power in a revolt against DiGregorio that was led by his son Salvatore (Bill) Bonanno.

Magaddino's Canadian affiliations are reported strongest in the Toronto area. A secondary narcotics route is from Toronto to Buffalo and Rochester. Magaddino has interests also in Winnipeg.

Montreal police dossiers mention Mafia involvement "in many criminal arsons, the protection racket, untaxed alcohol and fraudulent bankruptcies." The Mafia is said to dominate the pizza trade in Montreal's large Italian community through controlling prices of cheese specialties. An established creamery, in which Bonanno tried without success to invest, was heavily damaged by fire sometime later.

Mafia associates in Montreal reportedly operate a gigantic betting lay-off center where United States bookmakers unload their excess play. The Mafia is also reported to have infiltrated several legitimate businesses in Canada.

The Canadian police are chary about using the word Mafia. For one thing, there has never been anything in Canada comparable to the Senate Permanent Investigations (McClellan) Committee, which made a public record of underworld figures identified as Mafia members. The Canadian rules against disclosing police information outside the courtroom are stricter than in the United States.

Although Greco had been regarded by the police as the leader of the Mafia in Montreal, a high Canadian police official said recently: "Greco is only a door opener for Vic Cotroni."

NEW CONCERT ASSOCIATION OFFICERS

Summers Named Warren Concert Group President

Harry A. Summers, instrumental music instructor in Warren schools, is the new president of the Warren Concert Association for the 1967-1968 season.

He was elected last evening to succeed Mrs. Francis Ericsson who served as president for the past two seasons. Other officers chosen are Byron L. Swanson, first vice president; Mrs. Joseph H. DeFrees, second vice president; Mrs. Louis Conroy, secretary; Thomas Schormann, treasurer; and Charles R. Tranter, manager. Elected to serve on the board of directors for a three year period were Mrs. J. Russell Hanson, Mrs. Jacob Levinson, Mrs. John Roop, Summer's, Swanson, and Mrs. DeFrees.

The board decided to conduct a patron membership drive in June, a renewal mailing in August, and the regular membership campaign in September.

Persons who were members this season will have the first chance to renew their membership.

ships prior to the September drive. At that time, new members will be enrolled until the capacity of the auditorium is filled.

The association has severed its affiliation with the United Audience Service of New York and will revert back to its long-time status as an independent music series.

This means that the association will negotiate directly with artists' managements in New York and will conduct the annual membership campaign without "outside" direction.

Next season is the 20th anniversary for the concert association and leaders are planning a special series of events. Through the years since 1948 when the Jaycees adopted the series as a project and through the past six years when the concerts have been handled by a new non-profit organization, at least four concert attractions have been presented each season.

Some of the outstanding attractions have been the Vienna Choir Boys, Patrice Munsel, Ferrante and Telcher, Boris Goldovsky, Robert Merrill, the Pittsburgh Symphony, the Buffalo Philharmonic, Jerome Hines, William Warfield, Rise Stevens, Leonard Rose, Wrightson and Hunt, Peter Nero and the National Ballet.

Other members of the association's board of directors are Mrs. Nestore Bartholmew, Carroll Fowler, Thomas Schormann, Mrs. Paul Volkman, Harry Kopf Jr., Mrs. John Wendell, Mrs. Robert Sokolski, Dr. George Riley, Mrs. Arthur Hoshino, and Carl Stout.

Tidioute Council Covers Five Items

Tidioute borough council dealt last night with matters involving spring cleanup, recreation, the black fly menace, the resignation of council president, and the appointment of a new councilman.

In response to requests from the Tidioute Garden Club and the Port Nightly Club, Mayor G. K. Lodge officially proclaimed the week of May 22, as "Spring Clean-Up Week in Tidioute Borough."

Council supported the proclamation by voting to provide a truck to collect debris and refuse.

Council unanimously passed a resolution favoring an agreement with the Pennsylvania Fish Commission wherein the commission will acquire river front acreage within the borough limits and develop boat launching sites, parking areas, and sanitary facilities.

In return, the borough will maintain and operate the area and develop any further additional facilities.

The agreement is the necessary first step to activate the project. The fish commission presently has no funds but expects to be able to deliver the project within two or three years.

Robert Schwab, representing the Tidioute Lions Club black fly committee, outlined the findings of the state entomologists who recently conducted field studies in the Tidioute area. The Lions Club requested and received from council a resolution sanctioning a control program to be recommended by the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, Pennsylvania Department of Health, and the Pennsylvania State University research team.

Accepted with regret was the resignation of William Brown

Jr., veteran council member and council president. Brown's present employment schedule conflicts with his duties on council. Appointed to fill his term, which expires January 1, 1968, was Harold Korkle. Vice president William Robinson moved into the president's post and Walter McKown was elected vice president.

Council authorized the county tax office to prepare the borough's tax duplicate as in former years. Borough solicitor Attorney Sidney Blackman was instructed to contact two property owners about repairing and making secure their empty buildings which constitute fire safety hazards. Council is concerned about the safety of children who enter the buildings through broken windows and doors and the possibility of fire.

Boro Council Business Includes Industry Park

Borough council last night devoted most of its time to proposed building, housing and plumbing codes and the current controversy which has arisen over Warren Television Company's move to recall capital contribution certificates and subsequent rate increases for original subscribers.

In addition town fathers learned a proposal from Albert Lorranger and Ernest C. Miller to purchase the Warren airport for $100,000 with an eye to constructing an industrial park, was still under consideration and the public safety committee was giving further consideration to the idea of odd and even parking on some borough streets.

Richard Meacham of the parks and playgrounds committee reported elm tree blight on some private properties - a situation which falls into the realm of the "shade tree" ordinance. A three-member commission is to be appointed - or, as Councilman Rockwell O'Shiell put it, "a shady three."

Mayor D. E. Conaway stressed the fact that he alone can excuse a motorist from an unwarranted traffic ticket and that the laws must be enforced to help parking problems, avoid accidents and promote tourism. He also said he will be in Harrisburg tomorrow to confer with Governor Shafer in regard to solving many problems concerning Warren.

In a brief discussion about paying Pennsylvania Railroad for a right of way necessary to a crossing on Elm St., the question was raised as to why the borough had to pay the railroad. In light of past and future dealings with PRR, when it was suggested that "in going back over the years "and the possibility" we might get our money back," council president James Torrance-either by slip of the tongue (or design) said - maybe we can do it in "one foul swoop."

Census by Mail

OTTAWA (AP) — Canada will conduct an experimental census by mail in September to gather information from 60,000 households. If the trial is successful, the Bureau of Statistics may employ it in large urban centers for the full census of Canada in 1971. The use of mailed questionnaires may prove less expensive than door-to-door canvassing and will insure information remains confidential, officials said.

Keep Your Eye On The Ball!

This, they say, is the essential thing to remember if you are to be successful at most of our competitive sports.

It's also the thing to remember in many other walks of life, the "ball" being your personal interests and those things that could contribute to your general welfare.

This being so, the time has come to alert the outdoorsist --- hunter, fisherman, camper, hiker, bird watcher, and nature lover --- that in this day and age he had better keep his eye on the ball or the results could be disastrous.

His interests are being played up big under the general heading of "recreation." He is told daily through the facilities of the news media that the demand for recreational facilities and open land exceeds our present supply. He is urged to back the spending of huge amounts of either federal or state funds to acquire more public acreage or build more public recreational facilities.

But some basic facts should be considered if the outdoorsist is to be credited with "keeping his eye on the ball."

In the first place, Dr. Maurice Goddard, Secretary of Forest and Waters, recently stated there are 17-million acres of forested (recreational) lands in Pennsylvania. Two million of these acres are owned by his department, another million acres by the Pennsylvania Game Commission, and a half-million acres make up the Allegheny National Forest. Smaller plots are owned by lesser governmental bodies.

Added together, these public-owned lands would make up no more than four or five million acres. Private landowners control the other 12 or 13 million acres, much of which is open to most recreational activities through the generous attitude of the individual or industrial owners.

But this generous attitude is changing. The private landowner is asking, "Why should I be asked to contribute funds (through taxation) to buy public lands and at the same time put up with public use of my personal holdings?" Every year more and more lands are being posted against public use.

This trend must change. Governmental agencies (who are better informed) should cease trying to convince the public that the time will ever come when all public recreation can be concentrated on public-owned lands. Or that recreational facilities built with public funds will ever meet the overall recreational demand. Such a goal is beyond our financial abilities.

What we must do is create an incentive for private owners to keep their lands open to public use. And the only logical approach is the "easement" arrangement that is being employed by the federal government in "scenic" areas.

Easements may be costly, but they are less costly than trying to acquire, in full, ownership to all of the lands a recreation-oriented public requires.

In the end, land use is the "ball" in all of our recreational pursuits, and the outdoorsist had better keep his eye on it.

ART BUCHWALD

Naming Of Lassie

WASHINGTON — The appointment of Lassie, the canine TV star, as special consultant to the administration's Keep America Beautiful program has hit Washington like a bombshell. With the appointment of Betty Furness as special assistant to the President for consumer affairs, and now Lassie, President Johnson seems to have decided to recruit more television personalities to dramatize his Great Society programs.

The reason why the Lassie appointment came as a surprise was that most political observers here in Washington believed Lassie wanted to run for governor of California. Now that he's decided to work for the administration, he may have hurt his political chances back home.

If the Keep America Beautiful campaign is a success, Mrs. Lady Bird Johnson will get all the credit. But if it fails, Lassie will be the one who is in the doghouse.

Sources close to the White House revealed that there was a foul-up concerning the appointment of Lassie. It seems that the President, who has promised to appoint more women to high government positions, had ordered his advisers to find a female dog to head his beautification program. Only after Lassie was sworn in was it discovered that the TV star was a male. The discovery was made when Lassie was introduced to the President's male collie, Blanco, in the rose garden, and nothing happened.

There were raised eyebrows among litter bugs, too, over the appointment of Lassie as a beautification expert. Critics have pointed out that whereas Betty Furness never did her own shopping before becoming a consumer consultant (her cook did it all), Lassie has always had someone picking up his litter after him (usually a CBS vice-president).

But Lassie's supporters maintain that he's willing to learn everything there is about litter and that he's taking a crash course at the District of Columbia garbage dump to be filled in on his job.

This is not the first time that President Johnson has appointed a dog to his administration. There have been others, in the State Department, Defense, HEW and the post office. But so far this is the first dog associated with the beautification program.

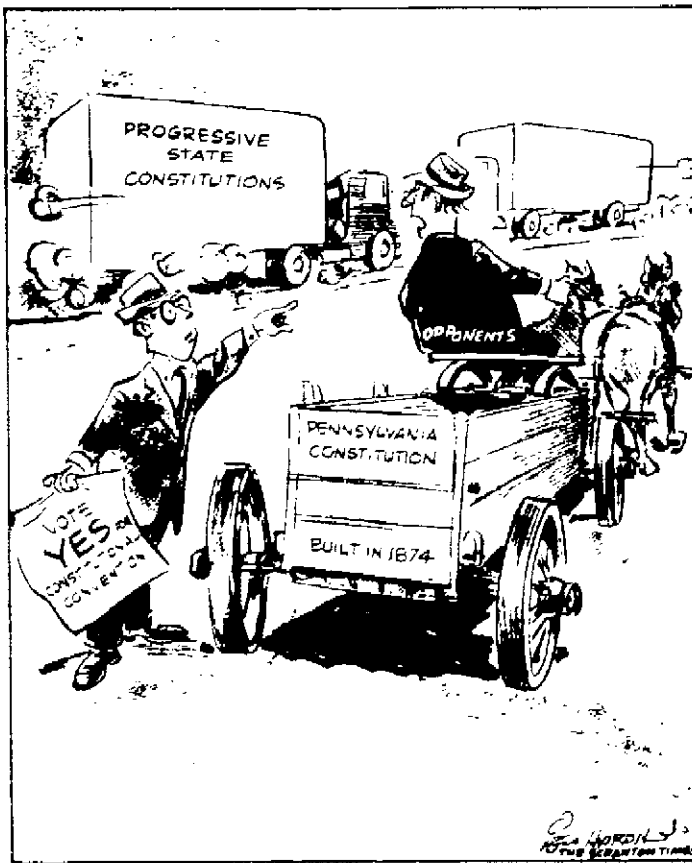

The White House denied the appointment of Lassie was made to pay off a political debt. A White House spokesman said: "Lassie was picked on his merits and he has the full support of the American Kennel Assoc. The President knows he will make a contribution to the United States, and to show that the appointment was not merely for show, he is upgrading Lassie's position and will let him sit in on Cabinet meetings."

There may be some Senate opposition to Lassie's appointment, mainly from friends of the billboard lobby, who feel that dogs have done more damage to billboards than anyone else. But Senate supporters plan to defend Lassie on the grounds that his bark is worse than his bite. Lassie was not available for comment, but close friends said that he jumped at the chance to serve his country.

A close acquaintance told me: "Lassie has vowed to run a clean administration and he isn't going to be pushed around. When he gets his teeth into something, he doesn't let go."

Asked if he supported President Johnson's policies in Vietnam, the acquaintance said, "Lassie would never bite the hand that feeds him."

Blocks For Starving

WASHINGTON—Despite a Senate finding of "widespread hunger in the Delta counties of Mississippi that can only be described as shocking," one stubborn Congressman stands in the way of federal aid for the state's starving Negro children.

He is bespectacled, beguiling Rep. Jamie Whitten, D-Miss., whose native Tallahatchie County is located on the edge of the hunger belt. He also represents other Delta counties whose officials have refused to recognize the existence of a hunger problem. As chairman of the House Appropriations Subcommittee which controls the Agriculture Department's purse strings, Whitten has blocked funds for the food stamps needed by the poor to buy government-subsidized food.

Secretary of Agriculture Orville Freeman has phoned Whitten repeatedly, pleading with him to approve the necessary funds. But the Congressman from Tallahatchie County, in a voice sticky as molasses, has denied that Mississippi Negroes need food. Their plight has been exaggerated, he insists sweetly, by "publicity seekers."

He is referring to Senators Joe Clark, D-Pa., Jennings Randolph, D-W. Va., Claiborne Pell, D-R. I., Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis., Robert Kennedy, D-N. Y., Winston Proust, R-Vt., Jacob Javits, R-N. Y., and George Murphy, R-Calif.

They reported to the Senate that they had "heard testimony and observed, first-hand, conditions of malnutrition."

They interviewed one hungry family with 13 children. "Some of the children," the Senators found, "could not go to school because they had no shoes, and had distended stomachs, chronic sores of the upper lip, and were extremely lethargic—all of which are the tragic evidence of serious malnutrition."

The Senators investigated other similar cases of stark hunger in a land of food surpluses. Yet Whitten is unwilling to admit that any of his constituents need food.

In his private conversations with Agriculture Department officials, Whitten demanded the names of the hungry Negro families so he could check for himself on the "true facts." The department dutifully furnished him some names, but skeptics expect the local authorities to rustle up food for these spotlighted families in order to claim they are not in need.

Last year, the Agriculture Department was able to distribute food stamps in Mississippi only because the Office of Economic Opportunity gave the department $2 million out of its own budget to administer the food-stamp program. Mississippi was the only state, incidentally, which refused to help distribute federal aid to the hungry.

One angry Senator, just back from Mississippi, charged privately that the action of local officials in depriving undernourished Negroes of food "borders on genocide."

Our combat troops in South Vietnam have been stripped of one of the basic freedoms they are supposed to be fighting for—freedom of the press.

Their favorite newspaper, Overseas Weekly, has been barred from military posts in Vietnam. The reason simply is that Overseas Weekly dares to criticize the brass and speak up for the GI.

Only a few dozen copies, which can clear South Vietnamese customs and censorship, are sold at civilian newsstands in downtown Saigon. But the military ban keeps the paper from reaching the troops in the battle zones.

Yet the Defense Department distributes to our fighting men such magazines as Lady's Circle, True Romances, Woman's Day, True Love, Romantic Confessions, Better Homes and Gardens, and Fashions. Even a publication called Hanoi, just what every red-blooded combat soldier wants to read, is on the approved list.

The suppression of Overseas Weekly comes at the same time that the Secretary of Defense, Robert McNamara, under pressure from Congress, is easing up on the censorship of the Army newspaper, Stars and Stripes.

Civilian-operated Overseas Weekly, of course, submits to no censorship. Nicknamed the "Oversexed Weekly," by its GI readers, it is a scrappy tabloid which has often raised the hackles of the brass by hard-hitting exposes. It triggered a Congressional investigation, for example, by breaking the story of Maj. Gen. Edwin Walker's John Birch activities while he commanded the 24th Infantry Division in Augsburg, Germany.

The paper has been banned by Chiang Kai-shek's government in Taiwan for unstated reasons, and the few copies that filter through commercial channels into Vietnam are heavily censored.

Pages five and six were ripped out of the paper by South Vietnamese censors the other day, for example, because of an expose of bribery and scandal in Saigon.

But at least the South Vietnamese censors allowed the rest of the paper to be sold in Saigon. Our own Defense Department has banned it entirely from military newsstands.

It's sure to be denied, but the Joint Chiefs of Staff have just about made up their minds to ask President Johnson to open a new front in Laos.

The government of Prince Souvanna Phouma, though neutral, is friendly to us and probably could be persuaded to "invite" an American expeditionary force to enter Laos in order to clear out Communist invaders.

A lot of supplies are being smuggled through Laos, and an American expeditionary force there could close the Ho Chi Minh trail at less risk than a direct invasion of North Vietnam.

Note: U. S. special forces are also operating secretly inside North Vietnam.

Letter To The Editor

Dear Editor:

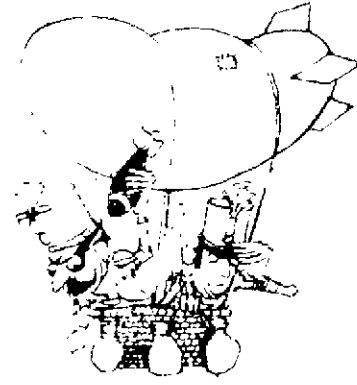

I would like to take this opportunity to express my sincere thanks for a very fine editorial in the Wed. May 3rd issue of your paper.

It's about time that someone in this county take notice of one of the most important links in creating the Kinzua Dam and Lake Area as an attractive and inviting recreation haven for visiting tourists and campers.

I am, of course, speaking of the Warren-Seandia road. This road joins directly with a new highway, beautifully landscaped and a very scenic drive, coming from New York State on the west bank of the lake.

Traveling along this fine highway is the vacationing tourist who we hope will spend his time in our area, but to his dismay, he enters Penna., or better yet Warren County from the north. What he sees is enough to make him turn around and go back in the direction from which he came. There it is, a dirt road hardly wide enough for a horse and buggy! If he continues on this path, he will come upon what should be a disgrace to our public officials who have jurisdiction over these road ways. It is a black-top road, very, very narrow, with edges so sharp and ragged that the best of auto tires cannot hold up to, sharp curves and turns that make driving a night mare and chuckholes too bad to really mention. I ask, how can our county even think of promoting an area with such adverse conditions as this? Do you think tourists, campers, and the like will ever want to come back to such a dismal place as this? No, I don't think so!

You also spoke of the future development of this area in your editorial. There are a number of gallant individuals and groups of individuals who have or who are starting to mold businesses there. They are wishfully hoping that our county will try to do something about the road conditions that exist there. Their very survival will be dependent upon the officials who have the last word on this problem. If these responsible people do nothing, then one of the finest potential recreational areas in all of Warren County will go down the drain.

Without a doubt, I am sure there are a great many people who will agree with me on the neglected and badly needed repairs of this so-called Penna. highway.

Maybe with a little prodding, some of our elected county officials and representatives might be able to pull some of the right strings in Harrisburg for a little of the taxpayers' money to buy a wee bit of black-top for this awful important road of the future.

Sincerely yours,
Dick Campbell

Progress Exacts Its Price

Whenever I see a crowded campground on the Allegheny National Forest, I like to think back 32 years to a time when I had my first experience in recreation management.

I was a District Ranger on the Apache National Forest, and my District covered 325,000 acres of federal land in both Arizona and New Mexico. In all this vast area of high mountains and deep canyons there were just two campgrounds. Both of them were on the banks of the Blue River on the Arizona side of my District.

The Great Depression was just six years old, and family camping was a luxury that few people could afford even though it was the least expensive form of outdoor recreation.

National Forest recreation was still in its infancy at that time and the only campgrounds and picnic areas on the Apache had been built by the Civilian Conservation Corps. It was the presence of CCC Camp along the Blue River that had resulted in my two campgrounds having been built.

These were the standard Forest Service campgrounds of the primitive self-help type. Each family unit contained a table and a fireplace. Covered garbage pits eliminated the need for garbage cans. The pit toilets on these campgrounds were standard equipment in those days. The camper was expected to gather his own fuel from the driftwood that lined the stream bank. Water for drinking and cooking could be dipped out of the Blue River, for in those days its purity was unquestioned.

Since it rarely rained, and there was never any dew in that dry land, the camper used a tent simply for privacy—not to protect him from the weather. This was open range country, so a burro or a steer might stick its head into the tent if the flaps were not tied.

Rattlesnakes were abundant in this canyon country. Tarantulas and scorpions were also possible visitors. The mountain lion and ring-tailed cat were both shy, nocturnal creatures, and would not bother the camper. Coyotes howled every evening, and the canyon walls echoed to their lonesome cries. The only real menace among the animal population was the hydrophobia skunk. A ranger on the adjoining Crook National Forest, while sleeping under the open sky one night, had been bitten on the nose by a rabid skunk.

To reach my campgrounds on the Apache, the visitor had to negotiate single-track mountain roads that switch-backed on steep mountain grades. These roads were treacherous, especially to the camper burdened with any type of trailer.

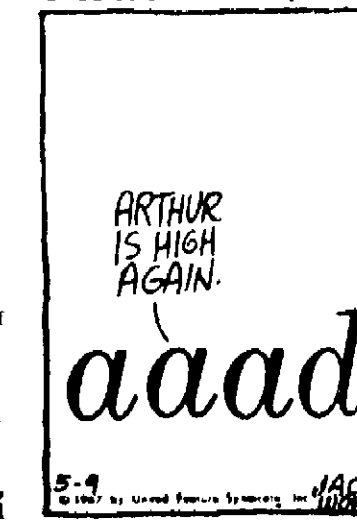

Having entered the canyon bottom safely, the visitor had to ford the Blue River a number of times. The canyon walls had forced the dirt road to snake back and forth across the stream. Fortunately, the term "river" is used rather loosely in the Southwest. "Creek" would be a more fitting word to use.

Still, the Blue River could be treacherous. Many of the crossings washed out, leaving hidden holes. I once spent several hours hung up in one of these newly created holes. The radiator cap on my pickup had become completely submerged, and a foot of water had covered the floorboards.

The most conspicuous feature about my campgrounds on the Apache National Forest was the almost complete absence of visitors. The few that did stop to camp were mostly hunters on the trail of the elusive mule deer.

Camping on the National Forests has come a long way since the days of the Great Depression, but most of the romance has been left behind. Today, campers want all of the comforts of home. For this reason they are not really camping. But then progress always exacts its price.

THE TERRITORIAL IMPERATIVE

WHAT OTHERS SAY

The Death of a Newspaper

Another historic day has arisen in New York's journalistic graveyard. The death of The World Journal Tribune after a life span of less than eight months leaves the nation's communications capital with only two dailies of city-wide circulation in the morning field and one in the afternoon field.

Four years ago, when the first of the innumerable tests of strength between the newspaper unions and publishers ended after a 114-day strike, New York had four morning dailies and three afternoon ones. That settlement and every one that followed has meant a sharp increase in publishing costs without any increase in efficiency or any go-ahead for introduction of the automated printing processes that are imperative to the survival of newspaper and newspaper jobs.

The World Journal Tribune was born out of a hope that the merger of three ailing dailies into a single corporation would rescue them from the morass of red ink into which they had been plunged by the combination of higher costs, archaic work practices and a steady shrinkage in revenue from circulation and advertising. Instead the new venture was greeted by a 140-day strike which tied it of much of its initial working capital, caused many of its ablest writers to quit, fastened on it all the most oppressive conditions of its old contracts and a good many onerous new ones and, in the end, compelled it to abandon plans for continuing The Herald Tribune as a separate morning unit.

The result was that the pooled survivor in the afternoon and Sunday field started life with far fewer readers and advertisers than it had every reason to expect originally. The drain out of creative talent during the long strike, plus the difficulties inherent in trying to fuse the editorial and business traditions of three distinct publishing empires into one paper, kept the new enterprise from achieving the standards of excellence that might have enabled it to triumph over its inherited tribulations.

To have continued now, it would have had to match a wage pattern involving a much steeper rise in costs than ever before—a pattern to which the two morning papers, The Times and The News, are finding themselves obliged to agree under threat of slow-downs-with-pay or another total blackout of publication.

The death of a great metropolitan newspaper especially one that encompassed such a treasure-house of journalistic enterprise and community service in terms of origin, is a tragedy for reasons that transcend the cruel personal grief and hardship to its 2,000 employees and their families. In this period of civic crisis and change, New York needs a flourishing and independent press characterized by diversity of views and by imagination in setting forth those views. Monopolies are unhealthy in any field, and most of all in the communication of ideas.

The disappearance of The World Journal Tribune puts on the three dailies still left in New York a vastly heightened responsibility for the faithful execution of their mission of public enlightenment. Even more, it points up the need for a basic overhaul of the destructive relationship that governs the newspapers and their unions. A more orderly pattern must replace the present suicidal course—for the community's benefit.—New York Times.

Taking the Antiwar Cure

(c) N. Y. Times News Service WASHINGTON—The administration seems at last to have come up with a sensible idea for reducing public opposition to the Vietnam war. The proposal is to set up several war rehabilitation centers to which war objectors of all stripes may voluntarily commit themselves for therapy.

Baker

The pilot model for such a center has been operating in Washington for months. Though its directors hesitate to make public claims, it is no secret that they are delighted by the number of antiwar protesters who have been enabled to resume their roles in society with well-adjusted war fervor.

A visit to the center can be inspiring. "When I checked myself in here," one patient said the other day, "I had reached a point of such desperate opposition that I wanted to burn a flag in front of my house. Now, all I want is to see Casius Clay go to prison."

This patient, like most who commit themselves to the center, was assisted by his family and neighbors in perceiving the desperation of his condition. Specifically, his wife told him that if he tried to burn a flag in his particular neighborhood, the neighbors would probably beat him severely.

"Such external stimuli are frequently needed to make the patient see the depth of his plight and take the positive step of committing himself for rehabilitation," explained Dr. Heinz Jiggs, the center's director of therapy.

The center has few rules. "However, if a patient comes in wearing a beard, we insist that he shave," Dr. Jiggs said. "We are also rather adamant about regular bathing. Have you ever noticed that fastidiousness about cleanliness and neat grooming seems to be linked with enthusiasm for warfare?"

For the first week inside the center, the patient is expected to break his antiwar reading habit cold-turkey. He is cut off from the press utterances of Senator Fulbright, Hartke, McGovern and Kennedy. He is warned that attempting to smuggle a "Ramparts," "Liberation," "Dissent" or "The New York Review of Books" into the grounds is cause for ejection. During the third day of withdrawal, when the patient's craving for tendentious reading matter about the war is almost unbearable, he is given his first dose of literary support. This usually consists of a small shot of the press-conference statements of Secretary of State Dean Rusk.

If he tolerates these he may receive larger injections of Rusk next day and, a few days later, the Vietnam policy speeches of President Johnson since election day, 1964.

Accepting this change of literature is surprisingly easy for most patients, Dr. Jiggs reports. "Since most of those who commit themselves are highly motivated, in that they realize their opposition to the war, unless overcome, may cost them their jobs and good reputations, they are willing to accept any reading that will help rationalize a comfortable change of view," he says.

The center's most difficult problem is helping the patient to attain just the proper degree of war fervor. "Look at this," Doctor Jiggs said, indicating a large glass-paneled room in which a freshly shaved gentleman was walking up and down before a mock-up of the White House, screaming, "Nuke the Reds back to the stone age!"

"A typical problem case," said the doctor. "He arrived yesterday in terror that his long record of opposition to the war would lead to a federal indictment of nonpatriotism. Typically, he over-reacts."

"Hit 'em with everything we've got!" the gentleman was advising the cardboard White House. "Mine Haiphong harbor! Bomb Fulbright!"

"Within two weeks," said Dr. Jiggs, "we'll have him rehabilitated as happily as this chap here." And he indicated another room in which a patient sat reading Herman Kahn's guide to civilized escalation. "We want no wider war," the patient said, as Dr. Jiggs entered the room.

Ballot Marked 2-A

HARRISBURG — Pennsylvania's voters, when they go to the polls one week from today probably won't realize it but they will be deciding an issue that perhaps ranks with equal importance to the testy question of whether a limited constitutional convention should be called.

Denison

The issue in question comes under the general heading of "Legislative branch" of the eight constitutional amendments to be voted next week.

In essence the amendment is a simple one; you'll find it on the ballot marked 2-A. While "simple," the effects can be quite far-reaching — and of tremendous importance.

All the 2-A amendment would do, in effect, is make the Legislature a continuing body. On the surface it doesn't sound like anything worth more than a sneeze or two.

Underneath and underlying the story is quite different. Up to the present time, under terms of the State Constitution, the most powerful branch of government in Pennsylvania's orbit — the legislative branch — ceases to exist to all intents and purposes once it adjourns finally (sine die).

For example, if the Legislature were to go into final adjournment June 1, it would be a dead horse until "regularly" scheduled to convene again in January of 1968.

Under present constitutional stipulations it cannot reconvene itself; it cannot call itself back into session.

In effect therefore it becomes a vehicle of the (opposition, in theory) executive branch headed by the Governor — to be reconvened only at his pleasure via the special session route, and then to act only on whatever subject matter he may stipulate. The legislative branch is regarded as about the closest you can come to "representative government of the people" inasmuch as the local citizenry itself elects the members of the Legislature.

Thus once the Legislature adjourns finally, Pennsylvania's citizenry, per se, is bereft of its representative government, placed at the "mercy" of the appointive (with the exception of the Governor and Lieutenant-Governor) executive branch.

The question of course arises as to why there should be a need for bothering to change the present setup if the Governor has the right to recall the Legislature at any time.

To illustrate the point — albeit a perhaps absurd and far-fetched point — should circumstances warrant initiation of impeachment proceedings against His Excellency, the sole right of which is vested in the legislative branch, it is inconceivable that a Governor would reconvene the Legislature in special session to hang his own goose!

Again, this merely illustrates the straps and nooses now hung around the Legislature by the constitutional limitation as at present.

It is interesting to note perhaps that on several occasions during past administrations, when either House or Senate were in control of the opposition party, situations developed that underscored the need for continuing session method.

Under such circumstances, when one of the two legislative chambers is held by the opposition party, an administration always is anxious to get the legislative branch out of the hair of the executive branch. Under the circumstances, administration calls for early final adjournment were routine.

Yet the number of subjects requiring legislative action — that popped up "after" the administration's proposed early adjournment dates — were numerous.

Under 2-A, the Governor's right to call special sessions would not be impaired — but the Legislature, on petition of a majority of members of each house, could also call itself into special session.

SYLVIA PORTER

Public Interest is High

How much business-financial-economic news do you want to read in this newspaper every day? Would you be willing to have less space devoted to, say, sports or women's fashions in order to release more space for news on the cost of living, the stock market, interest rates, income taxes, Social Security benefits, profits, job trends, etc.? Do you want more or less stories interpreting economic news, more or less statistical tables?

Porter

Never has public interest in general business as well as "how to" pocketbook news been as high and widespread as now. Never have the top newspaper editors of our country been so aware of your interest and so eager to satisfy it as now.

What, then, are we, who dig out, report, analyze and edit news in this vast area, doing right? What are we doing wrong?

To try to find the answers, we, the business writers of the U. S., have created our first trade association ever: the Society of American Business Writers. The fact that we at last have organized is in itself both a reflection of the growing importance of economic news and a recognition by us that we must upgrade our own competence.

Your mounting interest is no accident. Fundamental forces are spurring it. For instance, in this era, you have record amounts of money to spend on goods and services over and above the basic necessities and with this "discretion" over how to spend your dollars has come the desire to know what affects your dollars. Today, you live an unprecedentedly complex financial life and with this increasing complexity has come the urgent need to know about income taxes, trends in the cost of living, in employment, interest rates on loans and savings, in stock prices.

How should we respond to you? To illustrate my point, at a three-day work meeting of our society in Washington last week, we heard addresses by Manuel F. Cohen, chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission and Gardner Ackley, chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers. What they said and what their words meant to us were by no means identical. Specifically:

Cohen explained the bill the SEC has just sent to Congress which would place a 5 per cent maximum in most cases on sales commissions charged to buyers of mutual fund shares and would outlaw "front-end load" mutual fund plans (under which 50 per cent or more of an investor's first-year payments may go to sales charges). What these proposals mean is that the industry's leaders and the SEC have been unable to reach any compromises during months of negotiations, for these are the precise recommendations made in the SEC's original report last December. This in turn means there will be a bitter, prolonged battle in Congress and there may be no legislation at all this year. But this also means that the controversial hearings will highlight the fact that when you buy shares in a "load" mutual fund, you pay sales commissions averaging 9.3 per cent of the amount you invest.

Ackley told our group that the wage-price deadlines are not dead and that new steps to revive and strengthen voluntary restraints on price-wage increases "must be and will be taken soon."

What this means is that the Administration anticipates a quickening pace of rise in prices in the months ahead. The clear implication is that at the highest level of government, the biggest worry is not about a business recession but about a renewal of the price-wage spiral, of inflation.

This is news which directly affects your family's financial well-being today and which will directly affect your bread-and-butter life tomorrow. And this is just a sample of the sort of news which comes to us or which we develop every day.

Do you want to read about it and if so in what form? Tell us what you want to know so we, in turn, can tell you what you want to know.

GOP CANDIDATE For COUNTY COMMISSIONER
By Anthony Tomassoni

TO THE TAXPAYERS AND VOTERS OF WARREN COUNTY:

After reading all the pros and cons on the many problems that have existed in our county the past several years and still exist; it must be most gratifying to the voting public to see these solutions are simple political maneuvers. Of course, the impending primary elections could not be the cause of these long-awaited answers to such serious problems. Could it be that our present office holders have suddenly benefited from their years of public service and are now finally able to come up with these proposals??? How very timely for them!!!

I have concerned myself with all of these problems and have been bringing them to the attention of the VOTING PUBLIC through my articles that appeared in our local newspaper every Tuesday.

One individual calls for abolishing the office of Economic Opportunity; another speaks of the situation at the Rouse Home, and still another has a solution for the Hoffman Home. I have stated and discussed all of these problem areas in past articles over the last six weeks. I am well aware of all these problems and firmly believe that we have allowed these conditions to exist too long.

I stated in my announcement for this office of County Commissioner that I believed that the year 1967 should be the year of awakening; I still believe this. I am not going to attempt to confuse you with figures or costs and by such methods thereby try to sway you with my overwhelming knowledge of statistics i.e.: the cost per child at the Hoffman Home or why the O.E.C. should be eliminated or the conditions that exist at the Rouse Home. All of these, plus all of the other problems that we have; we have been aware of over the several years. What can we do about them??

I repeat again my firm belief that we should make 1967 the year of awakening. Let us change all of this — LET US BEGIN — Let us not hesitate to wipe the present slate clean and begin a new era for Warren County by electing men who are going to get results not men who make pre-election promises for last minute publicity. Suddenly, it is time to vote and these individuals in their own minds feel that by releasing a few statements over the past few weeks, in regard to aforementioned problems, that they can create the feeling, hoping that the public will believe that they actually have been in accord with each other and that all of these problems have been uppermost in their minds. Well you and I know differently — it means that they are trying to survive — to hang on to their wonderful office and continue in the future as they have in the past; with nothing being accomplished. To give further support to their image they actually voted 3-0 in favor of the budget; this is the first time I have seen something like this.

LET US AWAKEN — LET US BEGIN — LET US take a new approach to all of our problems such as the AIR-PORT ISSUE, ANTI-POVERTY, TRANSPORTATION, TAX ASSESSMENTS, ZONING, our very important SENIOR CITIZENS, ROUSE HOME, and the HOFFMAN HOME. Each problem facing us can and will be solved if you the TAXPAYER — THE VOTER — face the facts. How can we forget the past performances over the years???

I solemnly promise if elected to do the following: The encouragement, enlightenment and advancement of all County officials. To reorganize and establish the social welfare of all county institutions for the protection and assistance of our SENIOR CITIZEN, THE SICK, THE ORPHANS, THE POOR and their DEPENDENTS and the needy in general with such material aid (State and Federal) for the eventual solution of all the problems facing us. With a final goal achieved in all these areas the results can only be the betterment of all the PEOPLE IN WARREN COUNTY. Finally, that the people of Warren County can be proud in knowing that the prestige and dignity of the commissioner office has been established, and that — RESULTS — have been attained at long last through dedication of purpose and a full time week has been restored to this office. For remember this, you the VOTER ARE THE EMPLOYER of all elected officials and the only way to assert yourselves is not to stay in a state of APATHY AND COMPLACENCY but to get out and VOTE. Our great constitution gives you this right, USE IT.

I earnestly SOLICIT your vote and support. I am applying for the position of a public servant, not, as a politician with a lot of fancy words and promises, instead I offer good common sense, hard work, and honesty and sincerity to serve you in this office.

VOTE THE NO. 1 POSITION ON THE BALLOT —
Sincerely, Anthony (Tony) Tomassoni

Vote 'Yes' May 16

(Questions and answers on state Constitutional Reform Questions as prepared by the League of Women Voters.)

1. "Who is the real enemy of reform in our state government?" "Apathy. People who can't be bothered. Yes, the State Constitution is everybody's business. It affects the taxes we pay, the kind of schools we have, the highways and roads, and many other parts of our daily lives. Apathy—not caring—lets the selfish, vested interests go out on election day and do their work."

2. "Why is the primary election May 16 especially important this year?"

"In Warren we have many candidates for county and local office seeking the nomination of their political parties. Besides this brisk and interesting campaign there will be nine questions above the candidates' names on each ballot. Pulling down the "Yes" lever on each one will take us a long way toward efficient, economical state government."

3. "Please tell me what these ballot questions are about." "To tell you very briefly, the first eight are amendments which would correct outdated wording in the Declaration of Rights; make the Legislature a continuing body; improve legislative procedures; streamline the executive branch of our state government and allow the governor to run for a second term; reduce the residence requirements for voting from one year to 90 days; provide an emergency amending process for the Constitution; repeal an outdated section on railroads and canals; and authorize bonds for conservation and reclamation of land and water resources. The ninth question on the ballot would call for a convention to consider four areas, each of which we would vote on separately a year from now."

"This ninth question—the constitutional convention—we will explain more thoroughly in future columns. The eight amendments were first published in complete detail in the Times-Mirror and Observer of Feb. 16, March 16 and April 15 under "Legal Notices." They have been described in editorials of April 28 and May 2. The Warren County Bar Association, which endorses a "Yes Vote on All Nine," gave full details in the April 19th newspaper. There is also material available from the League of Women Voters."

India's Rats Outpace Human Population

NEW DELHI (AP) — India, believed to have more than five rats for every human, now claims one rural village is rat free. A team of government experts said it is an experimental program it used poison at the village of Moradpur to kill more than 800 rats. They said 800 rats would have consumed more than a ton of badly needed food grain each year.

'Nine Yes' Committee Barnstorms

HARRISBURG (AP) — The Committee for Nine Yes Votes announced yesterday the formation of a "truth squad" to counter any false claims raised by opponents of constitutional revision.

The "truth squad" is to be directed by former state Atty. Gen. William A. Schnader of Philadelphia and composed of:

Former state Sen. Robert P. Casey, D-Lackawanna; Gilbert Nurick of Harrisburg, president of the Pennsylvania Bar Association; Noel Arthur of Meadville, a business executive; Mrs. H. Everett Sanford of Verona, president of the Pennsylvania Federation of Women's Clubs; and Gustave G. Amsterdam of Philadelphia, a banking executive.

"The truth squad will be on the alert this last week before the (May 16 primary) election for fraudulent claims by opponents of reform," Schnader said. "The truth squad is going to make sure that the people are not taken in by their... tactics."

At the same time, the committee, which is coordinating the constitutional revision campaign, announced that H. A. Thomson, secretary emeritus of the State Association of Township Supervisors, has declared his organization's support for the limited convention question on the ballot.

The Township Supervisors opposed a call for an unlimited convention in 1963.

Thomson said he felt the interests of the public were protected in the limited call since the convention draft would be voted upon article-by-article in the primary election of 1968.

Gov. Shafer, meanwhile, announced that the mayors of Pennsylvania's 53 cities have been invited to a luncheon in his reception room Wednesday to solicit their support for the constitutional campaign.

Earlier yesterday former Govs. William W. Scranton and George M. Leader, co-chairman of the Committee for Nine Yes Votes, toured Montgomery County.

The two cautioned that "false rumors" of a graduated income tax and failure to understand the proposed convention were endangering constitutional revision attempts.

Chapel, 20, of Warren received a $10 fine on a charge of driving to the left of pavement markings. William Okruh, 45, of Warren paid a fine of $20 for speeding. Safety Tire Fails Test In Detroit

(c) N.Y. Times News Service DETROIT—An expensive tire promoted as an extra-safe product failed to pass tire industry safety tests, it was learned yesterday. The manufacturer, however, challenges the validity of the tests and insists that the tire is safe.

The tire, called the Dual 90, is made by General Tire and Rubber Co., Akron, Ohio. Only one size of the Dual 90 line failed to pass the test, which was administered by the Rubber Manufacturers Association, an industry group.

This size was the 900 x 15 size, which fits big cars such as Cadillacs. General Tire insists the model which failed the tests is safe, but nevertheless it modified the tire construction so that it has passed the test. But there has been no decision on recalling any of the tires made before the modification, a General Tire public relations man said.

The tire was "delisted" or "decertified" by the association last Wednesday. The General Tire spokesman said arguments over this tire and the testing procedures had been going on for some time between General Tire engineers and the testing engineers.

Jamestown Fire Station Discussed

JAMESTOWN — The location of a proposed new central fire station will be the topic under discussion at a special meeting of City Council at 8:30 p.m. today in city hall.

The council's public projects committee is on record as favoring a location on the corner of Fourth st. and Prendergast ave. where the Greyhound Bus terminal is currently located. Fire Chief Virgil Eggleston also favored that location.

A resolution on the city council agenda last Tuesday naming the location was deferred at the request of the city Planning Commission, which opposes the proposed location.

The Planning Commission requested the deferment in order to explain more fully at a meeting why they oppose the location. Russell Tryon, planning consultant for the city, also opposes the Fourth and Prendergast location stating he does not feel it is in keeping with the overall plans for the development of the downtown business district.

Making appearances at tonight's council meeting will be Chief Eggleston, Warren T. Howard (architect for the new building) and planning consultants.

No final decision is expected to be reached at tonight's meeting.

The president of the American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations also strongly denied that the labor federation or the old American Federation of Labor and received any money from the intelligence agency.

DID BOMBING START TOO SOON?

Peace Talks Failed in Poland

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson had a man in Warsaw early last December ready and waiting to open secret peace talks with a representative of North Vietnam who never showed up.

This peace probe failed. The reasons why are disputed between the U.S. and Polish governments. But the secret diplomacy which led to Warsaw produced the nearest approach yet to a U.S.-Communist statement on how the war might be settled.

The statement may yet play an important part in bringing the war to an end, if it is ever to end through negotiation, some high officials here believe.

The Warsaw maneuver, initiated and directed by Polish diplomats, had another result. Indirectly at least it led President Johnson to prohibit all U.S. bombing near the North Vietnamese capital of Hanoi for more than four months.

North Vietnam was invited through Polish and other diplomatic channels to take some responsive step of de-escalation but never did so.

The story of this peace effort, from mid-November until two weeks ago when the bombs fell again at Hanoi, has been obtained from various official and diplomatic sources.

So far as official Washington is concerned, it can now be told because the episode has ended in failure to produce either peace talks or a scaling down of the war.

At the State Department, press officer Robert J. McCloskey said he had no comment on the story.

During the period there were three brief truces, at Christmas, New Year's, and the Vietnamese lunar new year in February.

Johnson personally wrote a letter to President Ho Chi Minh of North Vietnam.

Pope Paul VI, U.N. Secretary-General U Thant, British Prime Minister Harold Wilson, Soviet Prime Minister Alexei N. Kosygin and others took a hand in the search for negotiations.

In a sense the kickoff man for these endeavors was Janusz Lewandowski, a Polish member of the International Control Commission which operates in both Saigon and Hanoi.

Lewandowski went to Hanoi in late November and on his return to Saigon about Dec. 1 he arranged a secret session with Henry Cabot Lodge, then the U.S. ambassador.

Lewandowski produced a 10-point statement of what he considered to be the U.S. position on ending the war. He told Lodge he thought the North Vietnamese would be prepared to talk.

President Johnson and Secretary of State Dean Rusk speedily advised Lodge that the United States was willing to talk on the basis of the 10-point statement though some points would need clarification.

Lodge suggested to Lewandowski that the talks shift to Warsaw, and Johnson instructed John A. Gronowski, U.S. ambassador to Poland, to be ready for a meeting with a North Vietnamese representative.

Gronowski met with Polish Foreign Minister Adam Rapacki to discuss a U.S. desire for clarification of a couple of the 10 points. Rapacki warned Gronowski such clarification might block the whole project.

While these efforts were under way in Warsaw Dec. 6-12, the Johnson administration decided not to suspend air raids against North Vietnam, partly because there had been so many diplomatic moves in the past and partly because the Communists were making terror strikes in the vicinity of Saigon.

On Dec. 13-14 U.S. planes raided transportation targets on the edges of Hanoi. Some explosives — whose is controversial — fell in the city and there were loud protests that the United States was bombing the civilian population.

Athletes Get Drug Check at Olympics

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Athletes competing in the 1968 Olympic Games and future Olympics will have to sign an oath that they will not use dope to improve their performances, and must agree to submit to medical checks on drugs, the International Olympic Committee ruled yesterday.

An Olympic medical center will be set up at the Games where official doctors and specialists can check for the use of dope or stimulants, the IOC announced.

Conference sources said a draft of the new entry form for the Olympics would also contain a pledge that the competing athlete would not turn professional within a year after the games — on penalty of losing any Olympic medal awarded — but no final ruling on this was announced.

The IOC listed as "dope": alcohol, pep pills, cocaine, vaso dilators, opiates—such as opium, morphine, heroin, phethedrine and methadone—hashish and anabolic steroids. The new Olympic entry forms will also force athletes to declare whether they are men or women, to avoid male athletes competing as women, it was announced.

Anabolic steroids were defined as male hormones that increase the size of muscles, which are taken over a long period of time and cannot be detected by a normal spot medical check.

"It will be impossible for athletes to refuse to submit to medical checks" at future Olympics, IOC Secretary-General J.W. Westerhoff told a press conference.

Man With A Halo

(c) N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — Although the halo is not too readily discernable, Paul Hornung is on his way to becoming a Saint. The one-time Golden Boy of the Green Bay Packers was once such a terror on the gridiron that he gained recognition as the most valuable player in his league. But he also was such a mischief-maker off it that he gained the dubious distinction of being hailed as the Playboy of the Western World.

Sainthood was not perceptibly within his reach until the expansion shuffle in the National Football League whisked him off to the newly-minted New Orleans Saints. And when the Saints come marching in, Hornung will be at the head of the parade—as usual. He was encountered in his home town of Louisville the other day and seemed unruffled by the jolting changes in the patterns of his life?

For the last two years injuries have struck him down in mid-season and kept him virtually idle the rest of the way. Yet in the big showdown against the Baltimore Colts at the end of the 1965 season, the Golden Boy glittered in all his magnificence, still the best clutch player in the sport. In the spectral fog at Baltimore Stadium, he materialized as a galloping ghost to score five touchdowns. But this year there were none of the usual Hornung heroics. He didn't even get into either the championship play-off or the Superbowl.

"Just before the Superbowl game," said Paul, flashing the dimpled smile that once had the girls swooning. "Vince Lombardi called me in to tell me that the expansion draft had caught him in a dreadful squeeze. 'I don't want to do it,' he said, 'but I have to take the gamble of putting your name in the player pool. I don't think they'll draft you and I hope no one calls my bluff because I'd like to have you with me a few years more.'

"I could see the logic of his position. I'm 31 years old and have been plagued by injuries for two seasons. I began to think how nice it would be to stay on in Green Bay. But then a new thought hit me. It would be even more insulting if the Saints didn't even want me. Although I was momentarily upset, I guess I was relieved and flattered that they did. I went to an orthopedic specialist for physical clearance and I expect no trouble with the New Orleans club when we discuss terms."

Something new has been added for the handsome blond dreamboat of hordes of fluttering females. The big halfback marvel, once the most eligible bachelor in sports, has taken himself a bride, making it an almost simultaneous move into the states of Louisiana and matrimony.

"Max McGee, a noble whack, was my roommate before the Superbowl game," recounted Paul, green-eyes sparkling. "He had played less all year than I had and neither of us expected to see much action—if any. The morning of the game, Max let his imagination roam.

"Who'll be the big star today, you or me?" he asked. "I have a feeling that I will. Then I won't be able to go with you on your honeymoon. No sir. I'll stay back here and soak up the glory." He was joking but he was right. He became the big star with a lot of sensational catches and two touchdowns."

A pinched nerve is what led to Hornung's difficulties in recent years. Although he had had his neck jammed once during his undergraduate days at Notre Dame, the groundwork for his difficulties actually was laid in the 1960 championship play-off against the Eagles in Philadelphia.

"I was driving for a touchdown," he said, "and they closed in on me. I had nowhere to go and so I put down my head and Tom Brookshire hit me. I never felt anything like that until the same thing happened against the Bears last year. It was as if I had been struck by lightning. I had no mobility in my right arm.

"But I still came back after the crack-up, the 1966 championship to have my best year in 1961. That's when I set a one-season scoring record of 170 points. I even can remember the breakdown—15 touchdowns, 41 extra points and 15 field goals.

"But I lost all my fluency as a kicker in 1964. I'd kick a 45-yarder and miss a 15-yarder. They say it was a pressure but that's silly. I couldn't lock my ankle and was inconsistent. I missed four field goals against the Colts and made three against the Bears, including a 52-yarder. One day I kicked a 41-yarder and turned to see what signal was given by my old friend, Tommy Bell, the referee. He signalled it was good. 'You gotta be kidding,' I said to him."

There's no doubt about the shift of Golden Boy to New Orleans. If he hasn't signed a contract to do radio and TV work there and he was the mellifluous voice, the good looks and overwhelming personality to hit it big in Frank Gliford fashion. "Next on the agenda," said Paul, the devilry still bubbling within him, "is a movie I'll be making in Salt Lake City. I play the part of a lumberjack. While I'm at it, I might as well shoot for an oscar."

Littlefield Repeats At Tri-City

DEMPESEY TOWN — Gerry Littlefield of Tiona made it six races and six wins at the Tri City Speedway Saturday night.

Driving in the novice class, Littlefield again swept the heat, semi and feature races. He was hard-pressed in the feature. The Tiona lead-foot didn't get the lead until the 18th lap in the 20-lap feature.

In the 25-lap feature for the super modified cars, Buddy Cochran of Sharon posted a victory over Bill Bannick of Harmony. Bannick had led the race for 22 laps before surrendering the lead.

Yip Robinson of Prospect made it two wins in a row in the super stock class. Again it took a come-from-behind effort to nail down the victory. Johnny Axe of New Castle led for over half the race and battled to the finish line with Robinson before losing.

Winners of preliminary races in the super modified races were Cochran, Joe Matius, Ted Wise, Bill Wheeling and Lou Blaney.

In the super stock the preliminary winners were Billy Myers, Frank Choura, Dave Stewart and Jimmy West.

Winners in the novice division preliminaries were Carl Aicorn, Dave Meloy with Littlefield winning the other three races.

PACKER COACH HONORED AT FORDHAM

Vince Has 'Open Door' Policy for Jimmy Taylor

By JACK HAND

AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Vince Lombardi left the door wide open for Jim Taylor to return to Green Bay yesterday but said the decision was up to the veteran fullback who became a free agent May 1 after playing out his option.

"Of course, we want him back," said Lombardi who was in town to accept Fordham's Insignis Medal, his alma mater's highest award for outstanding achievement as a teacher. "Jim is a great football player and you can't afford to lose a player like him...very well."

"But it's up to Jimmy to make his decision. I talked to him once on the phone since May 1. He never told me what he wants. We made the same offer as last year. The matter is unresolved."

Taylor recently denied reports that he had signed a $100,000 contract with New Orleans of the National Football League.

Except for the news conference that preceded the presentation of the award, this was a nostalgic day for Lombardi, returning for the first time in years to the campus where he had starred in the 1930s as one of Fordham's Seven Blocks of Granite.

"It was a great thrill walking across the campus," said the 53-year-old coach and general manager of the footballs champion Packers. "I am completely overwhelmed by the honor. Many people and many things are involved...my father and mother; Fordham University which gave me a chance to matriculate through football; St. Cecilia's (in Englewood, N.J.) where I first learned to teach; Red Blaik at West Point, the

Wisconsin Skipper Cops 1st in Power Boat Race

FREEPORT, Grand Bahamas (AP) — Odell Lewis of Fond Du Lac, Wis., was $25,000 richer yesterday after piloting his 32-foot racer through 15-foot waves to win the Bahamas 500 power boat race.

Lewis zoomed across the finish line 12 hours and 22 minutes after he started the 512-mile course.

Don Aronow of Miami, Fla., took second place in his 25-foot magnam as he reached portone hour and 38 minutes behind Lewis, whose craft was powered by two 450-horsepower Mercury engines.

Third place went to Chet Strickland of Sarasota, Fla., who finished with an elapsed time of 15:02:00.

The total $50,000 purse and the 512 miles over open ocean made the inaugural running of the Bahamas 500 the richest, longest and most grueling ocean race ever staged.

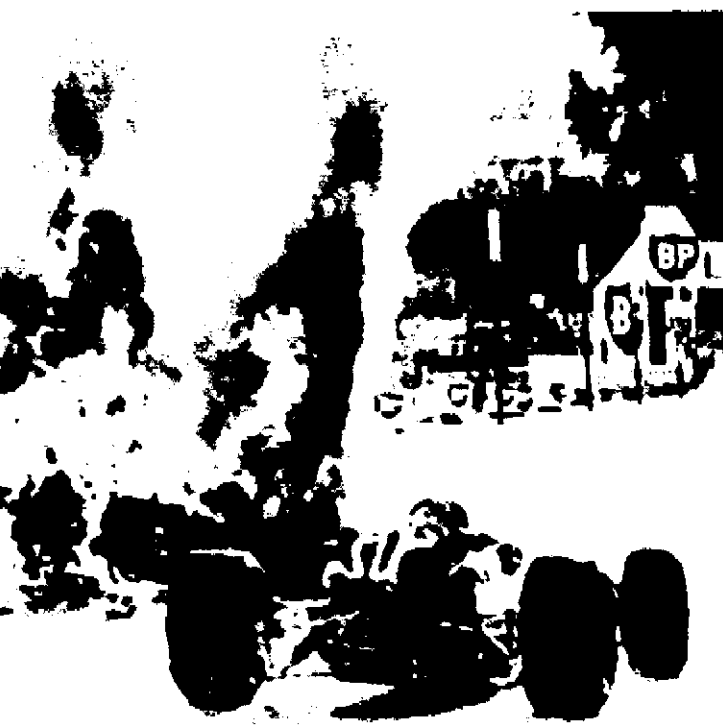

All but 25 of the 63 starters had been forced out of the race by the time Lewis crossed the finish line Sunday. Two boats sank and one burned to the waterline during the race. There were no injuries.

A crowd of about 600 students gave Lombardi a standing ovation when he received the award in the ballroom of the new campus center building on Fordham's campus in the Bronx.

The Rev. Leo McLaughlin, S.J., president of Fordham, made the presentation to Lombardi as a man "almost visibly transferring his vision, his determination, his strength, his absolute confidence to each of his players."

Houston Sells Turk Farrell to Phillies

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — The Houston Astros sold veteran pitcher Dick Farrell to the Philadelphia Phillies yesterday. It was a straight cash deal but the amount was not disclosed.

At the same time the Astros sold catcher Bill Heath to the Detroit Tigers' Toledo farm club of the International League for an undisclosed amount of cash and a player to be named later.

Farrell, 33, was one of the original Astro players selected in the National League player pool when Houston and the New York Mets were created in 1962.

He won 10 games and lost 20 and struck out 210 batters in 1962. His best year for the Astros was in 1963 when he won 14 and lost 13.

The big fireballing right-hander in going to Philadelphia will be returning to the club that originally signed him in 1959. The Phillies traded him to the Los Angeles Dodgers in 1961.

Heath, 28, acquired by the Astros from the Chicago White Sox in 1963, had one hit in eleven times at bat this year. He hit .301 in 123 times at bat last season.

The sale of Farrell and Heath leaves the Astros' roster at 26 players. The roster will have to be trimmed to 25 by Thursday night.

Drillers Champ In Bowladrome Sunday League

The "Drillers" whipped the Go-Go's for the second half title in the Sunday Mixed League at Bowladrome on Sunday afternoon, 2056 to 2028, but had to surpass that performance to defeat the Misfits in the evening for the loop championship. The Misfits, first half winners, combined to roll a 2060, but the Drillers came in with 2087 to top the crown.

Bill Wilcox led the Drillers against the Go-Go's with a 496 series and Gary Albaugh rolled 516 for the losers.

In the evening rolloff, Daisy Bailey came up with a 199-505 for high game honors for the Drillers and Bob Denardi's 208-529 sparked the Misfits. Sunday night's action concluded the winter bowling season at Bowladrome, but the summer leagues are slated to start soon.

INDICTED FOR DRAFT EVASION

Clay Pleads Not Guilty

HOUSTON (AP)—A quiet and subdued Cassius Clay answered "Not guilty" when asked by U.S. Dist. Judge Den C. Connolly yesterday how the boxing champion pled to a federal grand jury indictment of a charge of refusing to be drafted into the armed forces.

The indictment, charging violation of the Selective Service Act, had been returned earlier in the day.

Bond of $5,000 was set with $500 to be deposited in cash. The arraignment followed a conference between Clay's attorneys and U.S. Atty. Morton Susman with Judge Connolly.

Clay then was photographed and fingerprinted and was released after posting the bond.

Outside the courts building he joked with reporters, paused to sign autographs, shook hands with a ditch-digging crew and performed the All Shuffle for heavyweight Billy Daniels, in Houston for a bout with Texas Dave Zygiewicz Tuesday night.

Conviction could bring a fine of $10,000 and a jail sentence of up to five years, but Clay's attorneys say they are confident that he eventually will win his fight for exemption from the draft because of being a Black Muslim minister.

Clay appeared briefly in the lobby of the federal courts building about an hour after the indictment was returned. He was met there by Hayden Covington, his New York lawyer, who advised Clay he would not be needed there until later in the day.

Covington, Clay and Annan Hodges, a Houston attorney, then had lunch at a downtown hotel. As they began their return to the federal building, Clay and several friends with him decided to play a joke on the attorneys.

Clay stepped into the entry of a building and one of his friends called, "They've arrested him, they've arrested him!"

The attorneys appeared stunned for a moment, but then Clay stepped from the doorway, grinning. Everyone laughed, and continued to walk toward the federal building.

Covington said he would ask that the criminal proceedings initiated by the indictment be halted pending settlement of a civil case already on appeal.

Federal judges twice have turned down petitions asking that Selective Service officials grant Clay an exemption from military service, in that he spends 90 per cent of his time as a minister.

The civil case also challenges the legality of the Louisville, Ky., and Houston draft boards, because of an alleged imbalance between white and Negro members.

The grand jury deliberated about 70 minutes before presenting the indictment to the judge. The 21-member panel included one Negro.

The action came just 10 days after Clay, as he had said he would do, refused to take the traditional step forward during April 28 proceedings at the Houston Armed Forces Induction Center.

Clay said he realized his decision could cost him his boxing career and as much as $10 million.

"I have searched my conscience, and I find I cannot be true to my religion by accepting

Denver Broncos Ink Notre Dame Center

DENVER, Colo. (AP) — The Denver Broncos of the American Football League announced yesterday they have signed former Notre Dame center George Goedecke.

Denver now has signed 13 of the 19 men they selected in the draft. Goedecke was a third-round choice in the draft.

such a call," Clay said April 28. Within two hours of his refusal to step forward, both the World Boxing Association and the New York Boxing Commission had stripped Clay of his heavyweight title.

Covington said yesterday that the indictment would be followed by a long legal battle. "It's a long way from the end of the fight," Covington said.

Pairings for Heavy Tourney Announced

By MURRAY ROSE

AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A match between Germany's Karl Mildenberger, and contender Thad Spencer in Germany in September is expected to kick off an ambitious eight-man elimination tournament to determine a successor to heavyweight champion Cassius Clay.

This was disclosed yesterday by promoter Mike Malitz in New York and Wolfgang Mueller, Mildenberger's manager, in Frankfurt.

Mildenberger, the European champion, and Spencer, of Portland, Ore., and the sixth ranking contender in the World Boxing Association's list, will meet in Frankfurt, Germany, Sept. 2 or Sept. 16, both Saturdays, if plans are finalized, said both Malitz and Mueller.

Malitz, who had been executive vice president of Main Bout, Inc., said a new company, Sports Action, Inc., had been formed to run an elimination tournament, which may involve the American Broadcasting Co., the Houston Astrodome and other promoters.

SAI is headed by Malitz with two other former Main Bout officials, Bob Arum and former pro football great Jimmy Brown, as secretary and vice president, respectively. Malitz said managers or representatives of eight leading fighters met with him in New York Thursday and pairings were set for four elimination bouts.

In addition to Mildenberger vs. Spencer, the other first round pairings made were: former heavyweight champion Floyd Patterson of New York vs. Argentina's Oscar Bonavena, the South American champion; unbeaten Joe Frazier of Philadelphia vs. Canadian champion George Chuvalev of Toronto, and Ernie Terrell, the former WBA champion, vs. Jimmy Ellis, of Louisville, Ky., Clay's former sparring partner and a ranking contender in his own right.

Clay has been stripped of his title by the WBA and the New York Athletic Commission for his refusal to accept induction into the U.S. Army. He was indicted yesterday by a federal grand jury in Houston.

"It's a monumental task to put all the elements together," said Malitz. "But we hope we can do it. We sent out formal contracts today."

He said that the representatives of seven of the fighters had agreed at the meeting to the tournament and the pairings but that Frazier's handlers had not yet committed themselves.

In Philadelphia, a spokesman for the group which handles the 1964 Olympic champion said "we have neither approved it nor disapproved it." He said the group will meet tomorrow to make a definite decision.

Mueller, in Frankfurt, said "the contracts have been signed (for the Spencer match) and we will fly to New York this week

"The champ has not weakened, and neither have I."

Susman had said April 28 that it probably would take 30 to 60 days to get the criminal proceedings under way. He said yesterday, though, that the case had moved along faster than anticipated because of Clay's early statements to the effect he had no intention of entering the Army.

to settle the final details. I understand the semifinals and the final for the world title are to be fought in the Houston Astrodome."

A spokesman for Terrell said he was in favor of the tournament. He said Terrell's left eye, injured in his losing fight with Clay last Feb. 6, is well again and he will demonstrate his physical fitness in a public workout in a New York gym today.

Angelo Dundee, Clay's trainer and manager of Ellis, said he was "enthused over the tournament."

Al Bolan, an advisor to Patterson, said the tournament "is a very good idea. Of course Floyd has his June 9th fight with Jerry Quarry in Los Angeles coming up. When that's over Floyd will make up his mind."

ABC may telecast some of the fights Saturday on its Wide World of Sports program.

In the final, and possibly semifinal round also, the bouts may be telecast by closed circuit to theaters and arenas with overseas television to Europe and Japan via the satellites.

Malitz said "we hope to run the tournament with the approval of the WBA and the New York Athletic Commission."

In Toronto, Irv Ungerman, Chuvalev's manager, said he had not yet signed contracts for the Chuvalev-Frazier fight.

"If Frazier confirms he will sign, the fight will take place on or about Sept. 2 in the Astrodome at Houston or at Expo 67 in Montreal if the right conditions are offered," said Ungerman.

Willie Ketchum, Spencer's manager, said in Los Angeles that the elimination tourney was a good idea but that too many are in it.

"The only good fight Clay had was with Mildenberger," said Ketchum. "The title belongs there. All the other fights were no contest for Clay."

Ketchum said he had an unsigned contract for Spencer to fight Clay in San Francisco in July, but that fell through when Clay was stripped of his crown.

A TEEN-AGER'S FIRST CAR

by Henry Gregor Felsen

Last of a Series

WHY YOU MUST GET YOUR INSURANCE FIRST

I want to ask you a simple little question. Nothing more than your life depends on the answer.

The question is: What are you doing about automobile insurance?

If you answer that you intend to get your insurance after you have bought the car, your life is in danger. It is essential that you buy auto insurance before you buy the car. Your entire future may be decided by the exact minute your auto insurance goes into effect.

You can't actually buy the detailed policy before you have a car, but you can, and should, do this: Find a good insurance company that is willing to accept you; arrange the kind of coverage you need and want; to take effect the moment the car becomes yours.

Only now are you ready to look for and buy a car.

When you find the one you want and are closing the deal, all you have to do is phone your insurance company with the details. Your insurance coverage starts before the ink is dry on your signature.

There are several good reasons why your auto insurance needs to be arranged for in advance. I'll start with the most important.

1. The car is yours. You get behind the wheel and drive proudly off the lot. You are a serious boy, and your first goal is an insurance company office to arrange for a policy.

Two minutes after you drive away, another driver runs a red light at an intersection and hits your car. The accident is all his fault. But, as an uninsured driver, you may lose your license for as long as three years, just for being involved.

2. You drive home safely. Before you look for insurance, you want to show Mom and Dad your new car. You park in the driveway, leaving the car in gear to hold it.

Your little brother climbs in the car and accidentally hits the gear shift lever, knocking it into neutral.

The car rolls out of the drive, across the street, and runs over a neighbor's child. Uninsured, responsible, you may have to pay a part of your earnings to that family for the next 20 years.

These are just two common happenings, neither of which is "your fault." Yet, without insurance, one can cost you your right to drive; the other can take everything you own and much of what you will earn for many years.

Unless you are very, very wealthy, you cannot afford to own a car for one uninsured second, even if the engine is shut off and the doors are locked. It isn't only what you do with the car that may result in a claim for damages against you, it is also what the car can do by itself.

Since accidents and mishaps can happen at any time, even minutes after you have bought a car, it makes the best sense to be protected from the moment you assume ownership.

Another reason to shop in advance is this: The best insurance companies, in terms of rates charged and services rendered, are reluctant to accept teen-age business. Even though the premiums may be a hundred dollars higher than for an adult, there is more likelihood the teen-age client will cost the company 10 or $20,000 in claims.

If you wait until you have a car, and you have immediate need of insurance and no time to look, you may be forced to buy from some company which will insure you quickly, but which will also charge heavily for the service.

You may also find yourself in the hands of an expensive company which does not have a good record of service to its customers and which will not give you the protection you need.

Since insurance laws differ from state to state, your own insurance man can give you the details of the coverage you must have and the costs.

In general, auto insurance can be divided into three categories:

1. Insurance you must have (liability).
2. Insurance you should have (comprehensive, protection against uninsured motorists, medical and possibly income payments).
3. Insurance you may want (collision and upset, towing service, insurance on trailer).

This is what these various insurances insure:

1. Liability
This is the most insurance that protects you from damage suits for injury done to other people and property, for which you are responsible.

2. Comprehensive
This is the optional (if you own your car outright) insurance that pays you for such losses as from theft, vandalism, storms, falling objects, fire, etc.

Cost of the coverage is somewhat determined by the value of your car, since all you collect is A.C.V., actual cash value of the damage. If your car isn't worth much, you may want to skip this coverage and take your chances.

However! If you are financing a car, you will be required to carry enough comprehensive and collision insurance to pay the lender the amount he has loaned you.

3. Collision, Uninsured Motorist.
Collision: This coverage pays for damage to your car caused by collision or upset, no matter who is at fault.

This is the well-known 50 or $100 deductible insurance. This means you pay the first 50 or $100 of the damage, and the insurance company pays the rest. The lower the amount you pay, the more costly the insurance. On a very cheap car, it isn't really worth carrying.

Uninsured motorists: This very inexpensive (only a few dollars a year) insurance ought to be a must with you.

What it does is protect you if you are hurt by a motorist who does not have liability insurance and who cannot pay damages. With this insurance, your own company will pay you for the injury you suffered, should you be unable to collect from the offending party.

Safe Driving Courses May Be Mandatory

(TMO Harrisburg Bureau)
HARRISBURG — An amendment to an act relating to the public school system, sponsored by Warren County Representative William C. Fuellhart of Warren, would make it mandatory that each school district provide for teaching in its schools of safe driving of motor vehicles.

Under existing law this instruction is provided at the discretion of local school officials. The law now provides that safe driving be taught in elementary and high schools, "or in secondary schools only, in accordance with the standardized program established by the State Department of Public Instruction."

It was also specified in the Fuellhart amendment that "each pupil shall successfully complete the course in safe driving to qualify for graduation from any secondary school."

The Fuellhart measure has been referred to the House Education Committee.

Sugar Grove American Legion Auxiliary Plans Vietnam Newsletter

The Sugar Grove American Legion Auxiliary members will write a newsletter for area servicemen. Junior members are now going to be under the leadership of Judy Trumbull, the first junior member ever signed into the Sugar Grove American Legion Auxiliary 12 years ago. Judy is now an adult member and eligible to lead the group at present, and joined the legion auxiliary since her father served with the U.S. Navy in World War II.

Miss Trumbull had many reasons to want to help both veterans and the fighting men of today. Her grandfather served with the Army in World War I, two uncles still serving with the Navy after 20 years, a brother, who served in the Navy until discharged because of illness and another brother now finishing basic training at Ft. Benning, Ga. Many other members of her family are also serving the country.

The project planned for the group is printing a hometown newsletter once or twice a month to all boys from Northern Area. Later boxes will be sent once servicemen forward special requests for needed items. The girls will raise needed money by holding teenage dances at the American Legion home, starting with a Poppy Day dance May 19.

The most important part of the project is a list of addresses. Parents or friends should send addresses to Judy Trumbull, Box 205, Sugar Grove, 16350 or to the American Legion Home in Sugar Grove. Boys leaving are also asked to send addresses as soon as located.

Members working on the project are Mina Abbott, Ann Louise Brown, Linda Custer, Crystal Meleen, Debbie Meleen, Elaine Miller, Carin Petersen, Debra Petersen, Jane Russell, Jan Thompson, Marsha Thompson, Karlene Thorpe, Martha Trumbull, Nancy Webb, Kay Williams, Linda Williams and Marsha Williams.

Myers Breakin Laid to Youths

Two young boys are suspects in a breakin at Myers Laboratories at 121 Central ave. Borough police Sgt. Roger Thelin and officer Charles Musante, who are continuing their investigation, said the breakin was reported at 8:45 a.m. yesterday.

According to police, entry to the building was gained by breaking four eight by ten panes of glass at the rear of the structure. Once inside, police said, the culprits proceeded to break bottles and secure a can of black paint which they sprayed inside.

The suspects then rode the freight elevator from floor to floor, found eggs in a refrigerator and consumed them; broke into a Coke machine and sampled its contents and also broke into two gum machines.

Upon leaving, police reported, the culprits took with them a stamp pad, pocket knife and a brown jacket.

The breakin and theft was reported by the lab manager, Gordon Hanks.

Senecas Studying Rec Sites

SALAMANCA, N. Y. — The Seneca Nation of Indians has begun a study of recreation sites that can be developed along the Allegheny River Reservoir between here and the Pennsylvania State Line.

Development Counselors, Ltd. of New York City is making the study under a $32,000 feasibility study contract with the Seneca Nation.

The survey is required by the Economic Development Administration before a grant for utilities and highways is approved by the U. S. Government.

Three areas under study are Seneca Overlook in the Cold Spring area, Hotchkiss Plateau and State Line Run.

The Senecas hope for immediate development of trailer campsites and camping areas as well as boat launching locations, in order to establish some kind of control along the Allegheny River this summer.

County Receives $1,670 for ASCS

Office Manager Gerald Bensink reports the U. S. Department of Agriculture has made an additional allocation of $1,670 for Warren County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service under the Agricultural Conservation Program.

This is cost-sharing for lime, seeding and permanent conservation practices, such as tile draining systems, diversion terraces, etc.

Bensink says land owners interested in participating should make prompt application, as the additional money will be allocated first-come-first-served.

FOR SERVICE PROJECTS

Rotary Deejays Go On Air

A score of Rotarians took over the announcing chores over Radio Station WNAE-WRRN yesterday from 10 a.m. to 7:30 p.m.

A total of 270 radio commercial spot announcements were read during the day. It is estimated the project will net Warren Rotary Club about $780 to apply toward their various service projects. Chairman of Rotary Radio Day was Ed Johnson.

William Powell reported information from the League of Women Voters urging all voters to study the eight amendments and the call for constitutional convention, and vote yes on all nine on the primary election ballots on May 16.

Cliff Matthews announced continuance of the Rotary crippled children's campaign. President Norman Johnson reported previous years have had 100 per cent Rotary participation in this project.

Shotgun Booby-Trap Found in Cemetery

"If someone had been killed or maimed, the charge could be involuntary manslaughter," Sheriff D.E. Allen Jr. said yesterday, or at least a charge of assault with intent to maim.

The sheriff's statement stemmed from an investigation being continued by deputy sheriff James C. Peterson.

On Saturday morning, a Warren youth, George Yarzabek Jr., of 130 Mohawk ave., was mowing the grass at St. Joseph Cemetery, when he spotted three 12 gauge shotgun shells, placed on end in a row. The shells were live and one was bare, police said.

The shells, Peterson noted, were just about the right height for a rotary power motor to hit them and blades could have triggered an explosion. They had been placed in the cemetery not too far from the office, Peterson.

They were picked up Saturday and it appeared they had not been wet at any time. The incident discovered by young Yarzabek was reported at 12:30 p.m. Saturday by Thomas Musante, cemetery caretaker.

Police emphasized the potential danger of such a prank as well as the possible aftermath had someone been injured.

ANOTHER SESSION SET

Green Berets Train in Area

A hundred members of the Special Forces Reserve Unit, a segment of the Green Berets, spent the past weekend in the Sheffield Ranger District of Allegheny National Forest.

It was the second of two planning surveys in the forest, selecting areas for an exercise for several hundred of these elite corps units scheduled for the last week in September and first of October.

Robert A. Ritsch, lands use officer of the Allegheny National Forest, accompanied the group on their studies. Commanding officer was a Major Meyers from Wilmington, Delaware. Coordinator is Captain Harris, from the Philadelphia area.

Ritsch says the exact procedures for the fall exercise have been agreed upon and the project cleared.

Ritsch reports that in August, prior to the fall exercise, the Green Berets plan a parachute drop in the Allegheny Forest. The public will have ample notice. It will be held near the highways, so it can readily be observed.

Although there is no certainty, the group is talking about the possibility of bringing in a U.S. Army Special Service unit now on active military duty in Germany, to participate in this parachute drop.

Ritsch says the area chosen for the fall exercise is the Lacy Springs area in the Sheffield Ranger District, west of Sheffield. This is favorable to a large bivouacking operation and provides ample pure water supplies.

The Green Berets are a very dedicated reserve unit. The men are mostly professional people. They come from several states on the Atlantic Seaboard.

They devote great amounts of their private personal time to keep themselves at a peak of training at all times. "This," observes Bob Ritsch, "demonstrates a devotion that far exceeds the normal expected for this type of reserve corps."

In case the United States is invaded, or undergoes a nuclear attack, the Green Beret units would be flown from overseas, as well as alerted in this country, to undertake the national defense. The purpose of these exercises over rugged wilderness terrain is to accustom the groups to operate as underground units, concealed and living off the land.

Anyone Want a Flea?

Warren's first "Flea Market" will be held at the Sixth ave. garage-port and driveway at the Stuart Myers home, 511 Market st., next Friday and Saturday, May 19 and 20, for the benefit of Warren Summer Theatre, Inc.

The committee is asking everyone to scratch around for items they're tired of and would like to unload.

Those in charge of the Flea Market said they'll take anything except clothing, including dishes, furniture, furnishings, kitchenware, tools, jewelry, garden equipment and objects of art.

Said one committee member, "What's your poison may be someone else's antidote."

Anyone having contributions are asking to bring them to Myers' garage on Monday, Tuesday or Wednesday of next week where they'll be marked Thursday for Friday's 9 a.m. opening.

Some hoped the Flea Market would be conducted at the Summer Theatre's barn on the Scandia road's Plowright farm. Officials said there wasn't sufficient time and said perhaps an autumn flea market can be held there in September.

Republican Forum Scheduled Today

The forum is being sponsored by the re-activated Young Republicans of Warren County who will meet for formal organization purposes. Tom Africa, interim chairman of the group, urges all Young Republicans to attend the forum tonight.

Refreshments will be served by members of the Warren County Republican Women—an informal gathering following the forum discussions.

Boy Scout Camp Plans Activities

Boy Scout Camp Olmsted goes international this summer, according to District Scout Executive John G. Kloos.

This comes about with the observance of the 12th World Scout Jamboree to be held in the United States in August. Camp Olmsted, summer training center for Chief Complanter Council, will be attended by more than 250 Scouts and leaders from 30 troops.

The regular program at Camp Olmsted will feature events like those set up for the 14,000 Scouts attending the World Jamboree from nearly 80 countries.

Among activities are Scoutcraft adventure trail, conservation area, flag ceremonies, wide games and campfire programs.

In addition to summer camp program, nearly every Scout unit in Chief Complanter Council plans a "friendship campfire" or other assembly to observe the 60th anniversary of world Scouting.

Five Scouts and leaders will represent Chief Complanter Council at the World Jamboree at Farragut State Park, Idaho. Their reports from the Jamboree will be sent to all Scout units as part of the World Jamboree observance. Council Commissioner Dr. Khlar McDonald will act as "Scoutmaster" for the Council group, which includes William Dixon, Grover Cleveland, John Lasher and George King, all of Troop 8, sponsored by Jefferson Men's Bible Class of First Presbyterian Church.

Town Crier ... By Les Rickey

I ran into the Sidewalk Philosopher yesterday. He was standing in his usual place downtown and I remarked that it was a nice day -- for ducks. That set him off.

"I'm glad you brought that up," he said. "I've been meaning to talk to you about that ever since your article on the ducks that started dodging their duty on the Conewango."

"Now I understand that the critters aren't completely popular in town, particularly when they swim down the Allegheny and raise a ruckus along about midnight or so. But they're still a part of the community, and as such they should be given a little more consideration and not treated as common deserters."

"First off, I know why they left town, and it wasn't because they've fallen in with the anti-Vietnam crowd. That bunch is made up of chickens, and this is another type of fowl of a different feather entirely."

"They left because they didn't want to get involved in the problems of being too affluent. They had more money in the bank than they knew what to do with, and they've seen what it does to people. Can't say I blame them much for feeling that way, but it still doesn't give them an excuse to go cruising off down the Allegheny to Tidoute to escape their problems. After all, they're no better than people."

You know, I've never thought of it that way.

Area Beekeepers Schedule Meet Here Tomorrow

IT'S ANNUAL TEA TIME AGAIN for Warren General Hospital's Auxiliary this Friday, May 12th. Co-chairmen for the event, which will be held in the hospital's conference room at 1:30, are Mrs. Sam Gigliotti and Mrs. Ralph Sandberg. Ann Landers

Answers Your Problems

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Get out the wet noodle. You've goofed again. You said very young children should not be taken to funerals and then you printed a letter from a woman who was very upset because her husband's funeral was marred by roughneck kids running up and down the aisle in the chapel, falling over the baskets of flowers and fighting at the foot of the casket.

Some children should not be taken to a skunk rattle much less a funeral, but this is because their parents never taught them how to behave. We took our children, 3, 4 and 6 years of age, to my mother's funeral, and there wasn't a peep out of any of them. Our kids can be depended on to behave well at all times because that's the way we raised them. — A PROUD PAPA

DEAR PROUD: Congratulations, pa. You DO have a point. And now, we shall hear from a funeral director who lives in Bay City, Michigan.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I read with interest a recent letter about young children being brought to funerals. Perhaps you would like to know the general feeling of funeral home employees.

We do NOT like to have children under eight years of age come to the funeral home. Invariably they cause a disturbance at a time when peace and quiet are of the utmost importance. Very young children do not understand what is going on. It is natural for them to be inquisitive, but their shouting of questions and climbing on the caskets in the selection room are very hard on the bereaved.

We ask parents to discipline their children until we are blue in the face, but it goes in one ear and out the other. I hope the millions of people who read your column will take note of this and learn from it. You would earn the grateful thanks of every funeral director in the country. — W.M.H.

DEAR W.M.H.: Here's the letter and I hope it helps. And it is nice for me to get a smile from the members of your profession, for a change. Ever since I put the knock on going into hook for expensive funerals, I've been the stepchild of the industry. So hello again,

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My husband and I were invited to his sister's home for dinner several days ago. About half an hour before we were to leave, she telephoned and asked if we would stop at the drug store and pick up a bottle of soda. Of course I said O.K.

Two weeks have passed. We have seen my sister-in-law and her husband twice since that night and not one word has been mentioned about the bottle of soda. She hasn't even returned the empty bottle so I can get my nickel rebate.

I wrote you about this last week but I didn't ask you to print the letter. I am asking now that you do so because I would like your advice on what to say to my petty sister-in-law. — BURNING

DEAR BURN: You have spent 16 cents on stamps, not to mention the time it took to write about a bottle of soda that couldn't have cost more than 25 cents in the first place. If you've nothing more serious to write to Ann Landers about, get on your knees and thank the good Lord for a charmed existence!

St. Michael Church Notes

In special ceremonies during the Choral Divine Liturgy of Sunday, May 7, Mr. and Mrs. John Labesky Sr. received the Sacerdotal Blessing while kneeling before the Royal Doors of the chancel screen in honor of their Golden Wedding anniversary. Many relatives and friends attended the special Liturgy and afternoon reception in St. Michael's Pavilion.

During the month of May special devotions to the Blessed Virgin Mary will be sung every Saturday at 7 p.m. Confessions will be heard after the Moleben.

St. John Lodge, Br. 53, Providence Association, will meet after the Choral Liturgy of next Sunday.

The great feast of Pentecost will be observed on Sunday, commemorating the visible descent of the Holy Spirit upon the Apostles. The Holy Spirit appeared in the form of "parted tongues of fire", representing the principal work of the Apostles to preach the gospel to all nations, to all continents and all the races. The descent of the Holy Spirit completed the wonderful work of Christ on behalf of the Apostles, rendering them intrepid heralds of the gospel.

This feat is observed in the Church since apostolic times. On Pentecost churches and private homes are decorated with green branches and flowers, thus accounting for another designation of Holiday of the Green. This tradition of decorating derives from the ancient Jewish custom to adorn their homes in remembrance of the Law which God gave them on Mount Sinai through Moses.

The Monday following Pentecost is the feast of the Blessed Trinity, reminding the faithful that the Holy Spirit is equal to the Father and the son, for there is but one God in three divine Persons.

The Sisters of St. Basil the Great will conduct the annual Mother's Day Pilgrimage on the grounds of their Manor College and Fox Chase Academy in Philadelphia. The Divine Liturgy will be celebrated on the hour through 12 noon, beginning at 7 a.m. Blessing of Water will take place at the Marian Shrine of the Basilian Motherhouse which is adjacent to the college and academy. Procession from Christ the King Chapel to the Shrine and Moleben at 3 p.m. will conclude the Pilgrimage.

Three Ukrainian rite Catholic prelates of the USA will celebrate a Pontifical Divine Liturgy in St. George U. C. Church in New York, May 21, to mark the 100th anniversary of the canonization of St. Josaphat, OSBM. The prelates are the Most Rev. Ambrose Senyshyn, OSBM, archbishop of Philadelphia and Metropolitan of USA Ukrainian Catholics, the Most Rev. Joseph Schmonduik, Bishop of Stamford, Conn., and the Most Rev. Jaroslav Garbro, Bishop of Chicago.

On Sunday, April 23, four men were ordained to the holy priesthood in the chapel of the Byzantine Catholic Seminary, Pittsburgh, by the Most Rev. Stephen Kocisko.

Sherrill Maria Farnsworth Weds Frank L. Lloyd Jr.

Sherrill Maria Farnsworth and Frank Lorraine Lloyd Jr. pledged their wedding vows on Saturday, May 6, in a 2 o'clock afternoon double ring nuptial service in the First Methodist Church, Sheffield. Officiating was the pastor, the Rev. Jack P. Boyd, in the presence of approximately two hundred wedding guests.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde B. Farnsworth of 7 Willow street, Sheffield, and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank L. Lloyd of Star Route, Sheffield.

Wedding music was provided at the organ by Charles Young, with Miss Candace Larson the vocal soloist. Altar flowers were double white pomspons with a background of white gladioli. Lighted candles in candelabra highlighted the arrangements. Church pews were marked with white satin bows.

The bride approached the altar on the arm of her father. She wore a gown of silk organza over taffeta with peau d'ange lace forming the empire bodice styled with scalloped neckline and short sleeves trimmed with dainty ruffles and bows. Borders of the lace were also used at the hemline of the A-line skirt which swept into a full chapel train, topped with a bow at the back waistline. Her bouffant veil of silk illusion was secured by a crown of florettes with seed pearls and crystals. Her flowers were a cascade arrangement of white sweetheart roses, accented with mint white stephanotis and complemented with huckleberry greens.

The maid of honor, Miss Rebecca Farnsworth, sister of the bride, and the bridesmaid, Miss Joan Sundell of Warren, cousin of the bride, were costumed identically in gowns of blush pink chiffon with Venetian lace and bouffant veils secured by a cluster of petals and florettes. They carried cascades of ice pink carnations with a deeper shade of pink sweetheart roses.

Robert Sixt, Burnell Farnsworth, brother of the bride, Francis Peterson, brother-in-law of the groom, and John Sixt, all of Sheffield, were the groomsmen.

The mother of the bride chose a pink and white princess dress with pink and white accessories and a white gardenia corsage with pink sweetheart roses. The mother of the groom wore a two-piece crepe dress of turquoise with pink and white accessories and had a corsage of pastel pink sweetheart rosebuds.

The reception was held in the parlors of the church where decorations were carried out in pink and white. The three tier cake, frosted in white and trimmed with pink and white, was encircled with springer greens. Aides were Mrs. Francis Peterson, Miss Carole Swanson, Miss Joan Benson and Mrs. Robert Tudor.

For traveling to Virginia the new Mrs. Lloyd wore an ensemble of linen and lace in a deep pink and the corsage from the center of her bouquet. Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd will be at home at 203 Miller street, Sheffield, after Friday, May 12.

The bride is employed at Sylvia Electric Products Inc. and the groom, a graduate of Electronic Institutes of Pittsburgh, is now employed at Dorcon, Inc.

Pre-nuptial affairs were given by Mrs. Francis Peterson, Mrs. Robert Tudor, Mrs. Jack Pittcock, Mrs. Clyde B. Farnsworth and Miss Rebecca Farnsworth; Miss Carole Swanson and Mrs. Robert Swanson; Miss

Season Closes For Warren Council of Church Women

The last program of the 1966-67 season of the Warren Council of Church Women was held in the form of a May fellowship luncheon. Table decorations of flowers and candles carried out the theme of Spring. The principal speaker was Mrs. Ellen E. Johnson of Jamestown, who used shoes to illustrate her story of a young Christian girl from childhood through life.

Mrs. Raymond Rapp, president of the Woman's Society of the Grace Methodist Church, welcomed the ladies; Mrs. Robert Gannoe had charge of devotions, and Mrs. Glenn Engstrom played the offertory music.

The luncheon was served under the auspices of the Grace Methodist women, hostesses for the affair. Co-hostesses were the women of First Baptist Church and First Lutheran Church.

The officers of WCCW are now planning for the 1967-68 meetings which will begin next November.

SPORTS HAPPY COUNTRY CHICAGO (AP) — Americans are sports happy and getting happier.

Richard E. Snyder, economist for the National Sporting Goods Association, said 1966 marked the first time sporting goods consumer sales topped the $3 billion plateau.

It passed the $1 billion mark in 1947 and reached the $2 billion level in 1960.

Five categories of sporting goods are expected to show sales in excess of $200 million this year. They are pleasure boats and equipment, firearms and supplies, golf equipment, bicycles and fishing supplies.

Fishing supplies moved into the select list for the first time. Billiard and pool tables and supplies edged above the $100 million mark for the first time.

Bill Colgrove

Bill Colgrove Gets Role Of Movie Idol

William H. Colgrove, an active participant in all of Warren's three theater groups, will be seen in the role of Dirk Winston in this weekend's Warren Players production of "Mary, Mary".

Though only a Warren resident for the past two years, Bill has appeared in several Players Club shows, two Edinboro Theater productions and is now also cast in a Summer Theater play. His acting credits with the Players Club include: "My Fair Lady", "Detective Story" and "The Merry Wives of Windsor" in which he appeared as Master Ford earlier this year. Between all his acting activities, Bill is a chemical technician with Sylvania and was also recently married to Michelene Figliuzzi of Warren.

Bill is a native of Buffalo and has attended the University of Buffalo and Clarion State College where he was also active in campus theatricals. As Dirk Winston in "Mary, Mary", Bill is seen as a middle-aged movie idol whose star, though on the decline, has not yet faded. He still has the virility and charm to give the confused Mary a new slant on life. And for his old friend Bob McKellaway, who is in the process of divorcing Mary, the welcome Dirk provides a new slant on marriage.

The results of this romantic confusion may be seen this Friday and Saturday evening when "Mary, Mary" will be presented on the stage of Beatty Auditorium. Curtain time will be 8:30 p.m. Reserved seats are available for both performances and may be obtained by phoning the box office any evening this week. The Players Club number is 723-1870.

Opening lead King of ♠
South combined a good sense of timing with careful conservation of his resources to negotiate the 11 tricks required to land his five diamond contract.

West opened the king of clubs, which held the first trick. He continued with the five and declarer ruffed away East's ace with the deuce of diamonds.

South cashed the ace of hearts as a preliminary measure and when the ten appeared on his right, he decided to proceed with caution. A spade was led to the ace in order to return a small heart from dummy. East chose to discard a club and declarer put up the king of hearts.

A small heart was ruffed with the ace of diamonds. The closed hand was re-entered with the ten of diamonds, and South's remaining small heart was trumped high again by dummy's queen. A diamond put declarer in to draw the outstanding trump with the king and jack. The queen of hearts and king of spades scored his 10th and 11th tricks on the deal.

If South ever attempts to cash a second high heart from his hand, he will fall short of his goal subsequently, because East will trump away one of the declarer's winners. As the play actually developed, it would not have helped East to ruff the second heart lead, since South would have followed with a small heart from his hand. Declarer is now in position to draw trump with two pulls and discard two spades from dummy on the king and queen of hearts. He subsequently ruffs out one spade as well as his remaining heart.

Do we really want peace?

We talk about it, plan for it, and hope it will come into our lives.

But, are we willing to work for peace in our own hearts — where real peace must be won?

Christian Science teaches that a healing, satisfying peace can be found if we are willing to find for ourselves the spiritual peace that comes from God.

Hear a public lecture called "Peace is Individual" by ROY J. LINNIG, C.S., an experienced Christian Science practitioner. Admission is free, everyone is welcome.
